Grower Grooms Christmas Tree For White House

ANDY ANDREWS

AUBURN (Schuylkill Co.) — It's not so far from selling a tree for dinner table food to shipping one to the White House.

Fifty-five years ago, as Paul Alan Shealer remembers it, his father and grandfather began selling trees simply to get a "Christmas turkey."

Recently, U.S. White House representatives ventured to the Shealer Evergreen Acres Farm to select a tree for the President's family.

For two years back in the mid-1940s, cashing in on Christmas trees looked like the right thing to do.

Eventually, Paul Alan's father, Paul Alexander, and Paul Alan's grandfather, Harry Williams, planted trees to cut and sale.

Now, Paul Alan's wife Sharon and their kids Paul Anthony, 16, and Briana, 18, help run a small retail and a wholesale Christmas tree selling operation.

This year, an 18.5-foot tall carefully prepared and groomed Douglas fir (Lincoln variety) planted as a 3-year-old seedling in 1980 was chosen in a national contest to be the Christmas tree for the White House.

"This tree caught my eye,"

Jim and Gail Crooke, Bucks County, along with their children and employees, harvest more than 2,000 acres of hay a year from fields of 50 different landowners. The hay comes from an area encompassing approximately 30 miles. "I actually think of the county in terms of the ridges, hills, creeks — the lay of the land — almost more than roads," said Jim Crooke. Photo by Michelle Ranck

DUBLIN (Bucks Co.) — Tucked behind busy highways, framed by the city of Philadelphia, and nestled next to the Delaware River lie patches of green, the stretches of grass and farmland that produces hay for Jim and Gail Crooke's Windybush Hay Farms.

"This is definitely farming in the suburbs," said Gail. "Most of our fields are not close. The fields are scattered. We farm all over but we try to get them (the fields) close together in the central part of the county."

The Crookes, who are joined by children Nathan, 16; Jacob, 13; and Natalie, 11, harvest hay from fields in Bucks and Montgomery counties in addition to fields in New Jersey.

The various hayfields yield 6,000 half-ton square bales a year and 10,000 small bales from more than 2,000 acres. In addition to hay the Crookes rotate

Eastern Region Frozen Eggs

ATLANTA, GA.
Dec. 15, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Majority prices were unchanged when compared to a week earlier. Generally as the holiday approaches the undertone was no better than steady on yolks, mixed but improved on whites and unsettled on whole. Trading was light with buyers usually on the side line and sellers cautious as breaking stocks prices trended higher. Supplies were about adequate. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending December 09 , 2000 were 44% less than last week and 59% less than a year ago.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
December 21, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying interest remained seasonally light and unaggressive as dealers attempt to maintain very limited inventories moving into the holiday weekend. Offerings of bone-in breasts were fully adequate to ample and often discounted to stimulate sales. Boneless-skinless breasts were at least adequate to available. Dark meat items were more than sufficient, and leg quarters were usually long. Wings remained the best item ranging no more than adequate to tight. Movement into retail and distributive channels was slow, however, fast food and restaurant lines continued to see active interest. The market tone was weak on bone-in breasts, fully steady on wings, no better than steady to instances weak on the balance.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer

ATLANTA, GA.
December 21, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained seasonally limited with some light and spotty increases noted as a result of changes in delivery dates due to holiday closings. Offerings remained fully sufficient for current inquiry. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights were in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were mostly moderate to moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 47 to 61 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. In the parts complex, breast items were usually noted as readily available and slow to clear. Other cuts were at least adequate.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
December 20, 2000
Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary Wheat and corn bids closed mostly mixed with soybeans slightly lower. Wheat steady to 1 cent lower. Corn bids mixed 2 cents lower to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 1 cent lower Soybeans 3 to 4 cents lower.

Wheat bids finished slightly lower due to beneficial snow cover over winter wheat growing areas. Lack of fresh export news for wheat added weakness. Corn bids mostly lower due to some profit taking on the Board. Soybeans bids were pressured by favorable weather reports in Brazil's main soybean belts and rains forcast for Argentina. Overnight export bean sales limited declines.

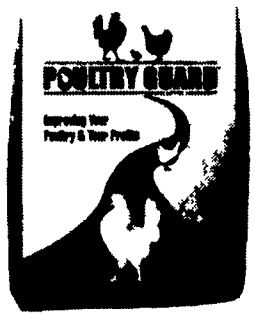
POULTRY GUARD™
LITTER AMENDMENT
New Poultry Guard™ Litter Amendment is a unique activated clay that delivers consistent ammonia control without the handling inconvenience associated with other poultry litter treatments.

Unlike these other treatments, Poultry Guard Litter Amendment is easy and convenient to apply and needs no incorporation or activation. Fewer application variables mean more consistent performance. In addition, Poultry Guard can be applied up to five days before bird set, whenever it's convenient for the grower.



Using Poultry Guard Litter Amendment Is As Simple As...

Apply
Simply spread over poultry litter.
- No incorporation
- No moisture activation
- No complicated instructions for heating and ventilation in conjunction with application

Bird Set
Poultry Guard can be applied when it's most convenient, up to five days before bird set.
- No application timing headaches between clean out and bird set
- No last minute application after equipment has been lowered

Control Ammonia
Poultry Guard will deliver immediate and long-term ammonia control and give birds a healthier growing environment.
- No more dangerously high levels of ammonia to stunt growth

You be the judge! We are confident this litter amendment will improve your poultry and your profits.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

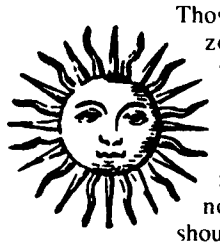
NEW MOON, DECEMBER 25

PARTIAL SOLAR ECLIPSE

Besides the usual delights of Christmas, December 25 this year also offers the spectacle of a partial eclipse of the Sun, visible throughout all of North America with the exception of Alaska This is the fourth and final solar eclipse of 2000 If you add viewing it to your winter festivities, be sure to wear proper eye protection



Those in the Eastern Standard Time zone get the longest period of viewing, with the eclipse beginning at about 11 00 A M and concluding at about 2:00 P M In Central Time regions, the event runs from about 9 30 A M until noon Those on the West Coast should begin looking for it from about 8 00 A M until 9 00 A M , PST

Is it so small a thing / To have enjoy'd the sun...?

–Matthew Arnold

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If it snows on Christmas night, the crops will do well.

TIP OF THE WEEK

AVOCADO MOUSSE

1/2 tablespoon powdered gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
3/4 cup hot water
2 cups mashed, ripe avocado
1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1-1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons minced parsley
1/2 teaspoon salt

mashed avocado with whipped cream and other ingredients, and blend well Fold chilled, thickened gelatin into this mixture, then spoon into a mold and chill until firm, for 30 to 45 minutes

Makes 4 servings.

Soak gelatin in cold water, then dissolve in hot water. Set aside to chill in refrigerator. Mix

OPINION

The Christmas Story

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.) And all went to be taxed every one into his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:) To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them; Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child. All they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Look At Odor Control

Leon Ressler, Lancaster County extension environmental agent, reports that in the summer of 1999 Penn State Cooperative Extension conducted an odor abatement study on eight swine farms across Pennsylvania.

Three technologies were evaluated for their odor control potential. These technologies were biofilters on exhaust fans, dust control on exhaust fans, and floating straw covers on manure lagoons.

One unique aspect of the study was that the neighbors to the swine farms were asked to evaluate the effectiveness of the treatments and keep odor diaries for six weeks during the study. Each neighbor received a survey concerning his or her perceptions of animal agriculture and odor evaluation cards. The cards were to be filled out each day between 6 p.m. and midnight. Odor was evaluated on a scale of 0 (no odor) to 5 (intense odor). The odor control technologies were installed approximately midway through the evaluation period, allowing comparison of scores before and after installation.

On two of the three farms where biofilters were installed, the average score declined after their installation. On the farms where floating biocovers were used, the overall average showed a decline in odor levels. The dust filtration treatment appeared to be ineffective in reducing odors.

To Look At Factors Affecting Odor

The evaluation of responses from the farm neighbors participating in the 1999 Odor Abatement Study conducted by Penn State Cooperative Extension has yielded some interesting results.

Dr. Ken Kephart, Penn State professor of animal science, summarized five factors that influenced odor scores:

1. Whether the neighbor knew the swine producer. The more the neighbor was acquainted with the swine producer, the lower the odor score.
2. Attractiveness of the farm in question. If the farm was perceived as more attractive, lower odor scores were recorded.
3. The respondent's overall health. Very healthy people recorded lower scores.
4. Whether the neighbor had refrained from inviting friends from visiting because of the odor. The more often they chose not to invite friends, the higher the odor score.
5. Whether the neighbor wished he or she did not live in this location because of the swine facility. The more they wished not to live here, the higher the score.

There were also a number of personal factors that had little or no impact on scores. These included income, gender, ages, education, whether the neighbor had been raised on a farm, length of time the neighbor had lived there, and the neighbors' reported knowledge of swine production.

To Report Manure Spills

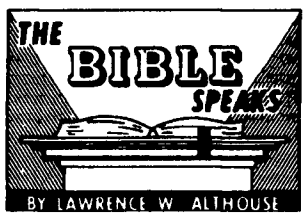
Occasionally things do not work out as planned. Sometimes manure spills occur because of mechanical breakdowns, operator mistakes, or natural disasters such as floods.

Jeffery Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County School District Adult Farmer Program instructor, reminds us that you are required to call Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) immediately when manure reaches any body of water such as a stream, lake, or pond. The phone number for DEP is (800) 541-2050. In addition, you should also contact your county conservation district.

Remember, if a manure spill occurs, immediately stop the flow, contain the spill, and contact DEP and the conservation district. These steps will work in your favor during the DEP investigation.

If you do not have an emergency plan in place, you should develop one. The plan should include ways you can stop and contain the spill, and names, phone numbers, and agreements with contractors who will immediately be available to assist you in stopping and containing the spill.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "The only way to discover the limits of the possible is to go beyond them into the impossible."



DO YOU HEAR THE ANGELS?

Background Scripture:
Luke 2:1-20.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 16:13-16.

On a summer afternoon in 1933, in a band of traveling evangelists in Murphy, N.C., one Annie Morgan sang a striking folk melody that captured the heart of John Jacob Niles. Asking Ms. Morgan to repeat the words so that he could copy them, Niles wrote out the text to a carol that today is sung and heard by millions every Christmas:

"I wonder as I wander, out under the sky,
How Jesus the Savior did come for to die
For poor on'y people like you and like I,

Poor On'y People

Niles later tried to locate Annie Morgan, but without success. She had slipped back into the humble obscurity so typical of the mood of this plaintive Christmas song. Sometimes, great contributions are made to humanity in the same anonymous manner.

That's what the song suggests: the Savior came to earth "for poor on'y people like you and like I." And that is why this song so beautifully captures the meaning and mood of the Christmas story — it is a story about the humble of the earth, for the humble of the earth.

The first news of the Christmas story came to two humble but receptive women: Elizabeth, mother of John the Baptist, and Mary, mother of Jesus of Nazareth. Although Mary's betrothed, Joseph, was of the lineage of King David, he was an obscure tradesman from a hill town of Galilee that was often the target of derision.

Reaching Bethlehem, Joseph and Mary did not have the clout to get a room in the inn, and so their child was born in a lowly animal's feeding trough. The only people that night who were aware of a great cosmic event taking place in Bethlehem were lowly shepherds tending their flocks in the fields surrounding Bethlehem.

There was hardly a job on the social scale lower than that of shepherd. The central characters in this story were "poor on'y people, like you and like I," and the supporting cast was composed of even more "poor and on'y people." As Howard Thurman wrote, "the birth of Jesus remains the symbol of the dignity and inherent worthfulness of the common man."

Christmas Eve is a time of special meaning for the poor and lowly.

There is a legend about a church in Mexico where parishoners brought great quantities of flowers to the altar on Christmas Eve. While the priest observed hundreds of parishoners entering the church with their arms laden with flowers, he heard a little girl weeping because she had no flowers to bring. The priest smiled and told her to go to the roadside and pick any weed she saw.

The little girl was puzzled, but she did as she was told. As she placed it on the altar, the soft green leaves glowed with a soft red light. The little girl's offering turned out to be the most beautiful flower placed at the altar! According to the legend, since that time, the poinsettia plant has been the special flower of Christmas.

'Be Not Afraid . . .'

There is also dimension to the Nativity scene. In addition to the babe in the manger and his humble parents on either side, in addition to the shepherds kneeling close by, there are the heavenly hosts, angelic messengers with Good News: "Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good news of a great joy which will come to all the people; for to you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord; and this will be a sign for you: you will find a babe wrapped in swaddling cloths and lying in a manger."

Then, the angelic messenger becomes a heavenly host, and, unheard by the rich and mighty, they sing the Christmas news to humble shepherds: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men with whom he is well pleased." The heavenly host still sings that magnificent message, but only those with humble heart will hear it.

What about you? Do you hear the angels?

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
December 15, 2000

November Milk Production Slows

- Milk production in 20 states up just 1 5%
- Cow numbers slowing
- CME butter falls to $1 20/lb

The Nation's milk supply is finally showing signs of slowing down USDA reported that November milk production for 20 select states was up just 1 5 percent from a year ago That compares with growth rates of 3-4 percent the first quarter of this year Production per cow in November averaged 1,463 pounds, just 4 pounds above a year ago. And the number of cows on farms in 20 select states in November was 7 85 million head That's just 1,000 more head than in October 2000

Both yield per cow and cow numbers are slowing down Milk production in November was up just 1 7 percent in California, down 8.4 percent in Arizona, up 8 5 percent in Idaho, and up 5 1 percent in New Mexico In the Midwest, milk production was up 19 4 percent in Indiana, up 7 6 percent in Michigan, and up 5 6 percent in Ohio. In the Southeast, milk production in Florida was up 7 5 percent

Butter prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange fell 65 25 cents per pound during the past 5 CME cash trading sessions Butter prices began the week at $1.30 per pound on Monday and fell to $1.20 by Friday USDA reported that year-end holiday orders have been placed and shipped Thus current prices reflect very short term needs. Food service needs are reported to be very active for this time of year

Cheese prices rose slightly this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Barrels rose from $1 0950 per pound on Monday, December 11 to $1 1100 per pound by Friday, December 15 Blocks also rose from $1 0950 per pound on Monday to $1 1250 by Friday USDA reported that natural demand is seasonally good and process cheese is moderate to good The government purchased 11,976 net pounds of blocks and 554,400 pounds of process cheese from the Midwest under the dairy price support program this week. However, barrel cheese from western sources had contract adjustments resulting in a negative adjusted total of 268,251 pounds for the week.

On December 1 USDA announced November federal order class prices of $13.68 per cwt for Class II, $8.57 for Class III, and $13 00 for Class IV. November average butter prices were relatively high at $1 4051 per pound, whereas cheese prices were relatively low at $1.0245 per pound. Since then cheese prices rose to support levels and butter prices have weakened. Thus I am forecasting December class prices of $14.34 per cwt for Class II, $9.19 for Class III, and $13.61 for Class IV.

Quality Assurance Programs Alive A

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — To improve the industry, several pork processors are making great strides toward carrying out their own quality assurance programs on a variety of levels.

Two pork packing representatives spoke Tuesday morning at the 42nd annual meeting and Pork Production Forum of the LanChester Pork Council at Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland. About 85 producers and agri-industry representatives attended.

About two years ago, Gary Neuman, manager of the kill floor and chair of the Pork Quality Committee at Leidy's, Inc., Souderton, traveled to Kansas City, Mo. to attend the first annual Stocking Conference, sponsored by the American Meat Institute. There, Neuman met and spoke with Dr. Temple Grandin, an animal behavior specialist and assistant professor of animal science at Colorado State University.

Grandin has designed many different types of animal holding and management facilities throughout the country.

Neuman, who has worked for Leidy's for about 23 years in many departments, devised a 20- page "processors' list," that not only provided information on identifying stressed hogs, but other factors to ensure proper hog handling procedures to ensure meat quality.

Neuman believes that handling the hogs until they are processed is more critical than genetics.

"Handling is more a factor in meat quality more so now than genetics," he told those attending the forum.

If you don't beat the hogs, or use shockers, and handle hogs in proper groups, meat quality improves.

Simply using slappers and the "voice" works "very good for us," said Neuman.

Neuman's experience is that a stressed hog results in a meat condition called PSE, an acronym meaning "pale, soft, and exudative," or "wet pork." With PSE, there's "a lot of lost money there," Neuman said.

Summertime is especially critical to controlling hog stress.

When the animal is stressed, what happens is a high level of lactic acid appears in the muscle, creating the condition called "wet pork." As a result, the animal cannot hold water and any flavorings that can accompany it. Pork chops are pale with no marbling and tough to chew.

With sausage, no seasoning ingredients can bind with the meat. It doesn't have flavor. In the case, the meat leaks. The meat itself is very pale, with no color.

The combination of heat and humidity, with summertime temperatures at 85-90 degrees at 90-100 percent humidity, and improper handling can make a deadly combination. If a hog is panting and foaming at the mouth, then PSE pork can result.

Tom Leidy brought in a ham sample that showed mishandling. The product can't be used for ham — instead, the bruised item is made into a smoked product. PSE results in a loss of weight, with no water-holding capacity, with a pH below 5.7. (Ideally, a pH of 6.0-6.3 is acceptable, Neuman noted.)

Leidy said that cooling the new lean pork, to get the "body heat out of the pork" on the rail within two hours, is critical for processing.

Tom Moyer, supervisor of procurement operations, Hatfield Quality Meats, will soon be setting up a Truckers Quality Assurance (TQA) program.

The program will focus on the work of Temple Grandin on handling hogs properly.

A video was shown at the forum. The video was developed with the help of the National Pork Producers Council in cooperation with the Animal Meat Institute, universities, and industry.

In the video, emphasis was placed on handling hogs in small groups, proper understanding of the animals' "flight zone," the importance of well-designed and clean facilities and equipment, and other factors.

Handling 6-8 hogs at a time and never running after and striking them helps ensure good quality meat.

Improper handling can result in dark, firm and dry (DFD) meat. Excessive darkness is undesirable, resulting in lower shelf life in the case.

Bruised meat is simply unacceptable, costing the industry millions of dollars. PSE costs the industry about $30 million annually.

Three important procedures include resting the animals 2-3 hours before slaughter, providing the animals with fresh, clean water, and handling them calmly. If the weather is hot and humid, hogs should be sprayed with cool water.

Grandin, noted Moyer, often will go to a "pig's-eye view" to see what the pig is going through from the dock through the shoot

Speakers at the LanChester Pork Council annual meeting in New Holland were, from left, Rob Meinen, Penn State senior extension associate; Gary Neuman, manager of the kill floor and chair of the Pork Quality Committee at Leidy's, Inc.; Tom Moyer, supervisor of procurement operations, Hatfield Quality Meats; and Bob Mikesell. and onto the sorting floor. "She gets in the chute and crawls up there," Moyer said.

Grandin is "one of the most important people that pork packers have," Moyer said. She is the liaison, Moyer noted, with packers and the public.

The TQA program for truckers will be critical. It will include similar Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point (HACCP) standards in place in other agricultural programs.

The TQA will make use of USDA inspectors that will watch hog unloading. If excessive shocker use is evident, the trucker can be written up, noted Moyer.

When the hogs leave the farm, the producer basically loses "all control of them," which can directly affect the pocketbook. The TQA will take into account tractor-trailer appearance, with slip-resistant floors; proper lighting; and recommended will be sprinkling systems during the summertime (though they won't be required).

The driver is the most important segment of TQA. He's the packer's "eyes and ears," said Moyer, of the industry, providing feedback about what's happening on the farm. The health of the animals, and legal weight loads, are the driver's responsibility, Moyer noted.

Often, producers listen to drivers. Some take driver's ideas to heart.

Moyer noted that "crippled animals should not be loaded, period," he said.

And "excess shocker and whip use is forbidden."

Moyer said, "All truck drivers want to do a good job. From a farm community, we probably have the best truck drivers anywhere. For the most part, drivers do a real good job."

Rob Meinen, Penn State senior extension associate, spoke about the new Penn State Livestock Environmental Certification Program. And Bob Mikesell of Penn State Cooperative Extension provided an overview of the Pork Quality Assurance Level III Certification.

According to Scott Bailey, council president, three new directors were elected to serve three-year terms. They included Scott Augsburger, production manager of Hostetter Management Company; Doug Brubaker, swine services representative, Hess Mills; and Eric Zeiset, White Oak Mills.

Tobacco Auction Opens Jan. 4

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The Pennsylvania Tobacco Marketing Association (PTMA) has announced the tobacco auction will begin 9 a.m., Thursday, Jan. 4, here at the Solanco Fairgrounds.

According to manager Dennis Hess, the auction will take place in the new exhibition building built last summer, the largest on the fairgrounds in the southwest corner.

The association, which runs the auction, will begin accepting tobacco Tuesday, Jan. 2 and Wednesday, Jan. 3.

The auction will accept tobacco for auction by appointment only. Contact Hess at (717) 626-6970.

About three to four buyers notified Hess they would be at the auction.

Tobacco is sorted into three grades and a "scrap" grade, Hess noted. Scrap is green or off-grade tobacco.

Shed burn or blue mold tobacco needs to have a separate grade. Shed burn is caused when the tobacco is hung too close in the barn and doesn't receive proper ventilation to dry it down correctly. Leaves drop off stalk and "it rots rather than drying down," Hess said.

For producers who want to market tobacco, Hess noted it is important to keep the moisture content down. Leaves should "rattle," said Hess.

Good cigarette tobacco should be at 15-18 percent moisture. In the past, some Hess has tested had moisture levels at 50 percent or more. That kind of wetness "has hurt our market over the years," he said. And water simply adds weight the buyers don't want.

Each bale should be about 50-60 pounds ideally, Hess noted.

Also, Hess said the auction is looking for warehouse workers to help move tobacco around four days per week. The auction also needs office workers to run calculators and a computer. Contact Hess at (717) 626-6970 for details on wages.

Hess also said that he is aware that two different lots of processed tobacco were sold by growers in the association. The association must receive three cents a pound on that sale.

Some growers who sold privately also need to forward three cents per pound of the tobacco sold to the association. Send checks to PTMA, 870 Clay Rd., Lititz, PA 17543.

The PTMA has about 450 members, Hess said. Hess expects about four million pounds of tobacco to be sold this season.

Farmer Cooperative Directors Conference Jan. 13-15

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — The "Farmer Cooperative Directors Conference" here Jan. 13-15 will offer cooperative directors an outstanding opportunity to focus on issues of interest to cooperative boards of directors and engage leading authorities in a discussion of timely issues.

Dr. Michael Cook, Professor of Cooperative Leadership, Graduate Institute of Co-op Leadership, University of Missouri, will "keynote" the conference with a discussion of "Advancements in Corporate and Cooperative Governance." He will discuss trends in corporate governance toward selecting board members for selected skills, the reasons for doing so, and approaches cooperative boards are taking to assure they have or have access to individuals with essential skills.

The cooperative workshops will focus on issues that are cooperative specific — that is, relate to the functioning of the cooperative, the board, and the fiduciary responsibilities and duties of cooperative directors. The program is open to all directors. Relatively new members of boards of directors are encouraged to attend.

Participation in the "leadership forum" will be limited to the first 40 directors who register. Directors in or expected to assume key board leadership positions are encouraged to register. Dr. H. Chris Peterson, Michigan State University, will be forum facilitator.

The focus of the 2001 Leadership Forum will be the future of cooperatives in the face of new technology and the restructuring of the food system. The session leaders are nationally and internationally in demand.

This year the Workshops and Forum Sessions begin Saturday, Jan. 13 and end Monday afternoon, Jan. 15.

The directors' reception and dinner Sunday evening, Jan. 14, from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. PCT, follows the NCFC Education Foundation's golf benefit for cooperative education.

For more information, contact Thomas W. Little, vice president, education, at (202-626-8700) or tlittle@ncfc.org.

USDA To Review Some Pork Checkoff Referendum Ballots

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Department of Agriculture announced recently that ballots cast in the pork checkoff referendum that were declared invalid will be reviewed to determine whether they can be counted as valid ballots.

Farm Service Agency (FSA) county offices reported that, of the approximately 30,000 ballots cast, more than 2,000 ballots were declared invalid because certain required information was missing.

Such missing information on registration and certification forms included the person's address and the date the form was signed. The missing information was for administrative needs, including identifying voters for challenge purposes.

FSA county offices are being directed to review the registration and certification forms for ballots previously determined to be invalid. Based on the new instructions, FSA county offices will count and report the results of their review. USDA expects to announce the results of the vote by the first week of January 2001.

The public may witness the review and counting of previously declared invalid ballots but may not interfere with the process. Not all counties in each state had invalid ballots, so interested persons should contact FSA county offices for information.

Lancaster County Tobacco Show Jan. 3

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The 2001 Annual Lancaster County Tobacco Show will be Wednesday, Jan. 3 here at the Lancaster County Farm and Home Center.

The show will have classes for vocational agriculture students and for other tobacco growers.

Vocational agriculture students who have tobacco and would like to exhibit may enter their exhibits from 9:30 a.m. until 11 a.m. Other growers can enter their exhibits from 10:30 a.m. until noon. Judging will begin at 12:30 p.m. with results available at the completion.

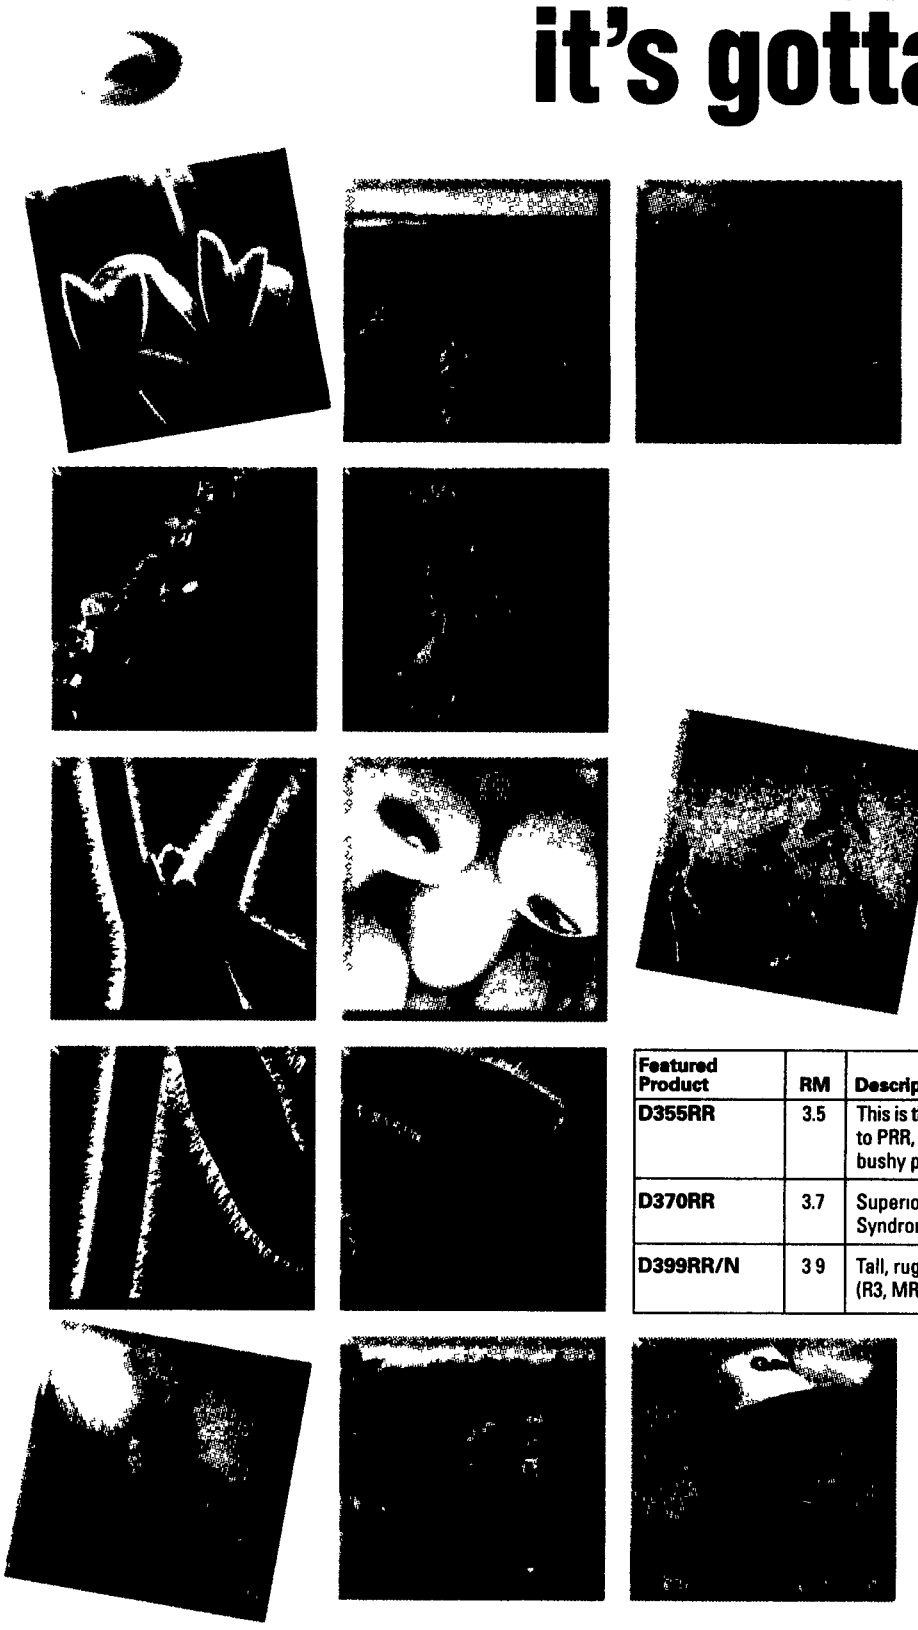
Penn State Cooperative Extension in Lancaster County sponsors the program. The Lancaster Leaf Tobacco Board of Trade funds the program. All Lancaster County tobacco growers are encouraged to participate in the show.

The show will be conducted according to the following rules:

- Classes are the same as listed in the 2001 Pennsylvania Farm Show Catalogue, except each class will also have a Vo Ag class, which is restricted to vocational agriculture students. Entries should use the class number as listed followed by Vo Ag.
- Maryland-type tobacco will be exhibited as "Pennsylvania Grown Smoking."
- Every exhibit must have a completed Pennsylvania Farm Show entry form containing the following information — class number, class name, exhibitor's names, address, and the exhibitor's social security number.

Anyone who would like to enter an exhibit in the show and has questions should contact Bob Anderson, Lancaster County extension office, at (717) 394-6851.

For technology and yield, it's gotta be Garst®!



These days, real risk management depends on technology. And when it comes to beans, no one has better technology than Garst.®

Garst soybeans offer excellent tolerance to Brown Stem Rot, Iron Deficiency Chlorosis, and Phytophthora Root Rot. Conventional varieties are resistant to Soybean Cyst Nematode, too.

And if that's not enough technology for you, try one of our Roundup Ready® varieties for unsurpassed weed control flexibility.

Featured Product	RM	Description
D355RR	3.5	This is the top yielding RR soybean in mid-group III! Rps1c resistance to PRR, above average SDS tolerance, and a medium-short, medium bushy plant type.
D370RR	3.7	Superior Roundup Ready® genetics combined with Sudden Death Syndrome tolerance. Rps1a resistance to PRR

Chester County Conducts 4-H Dairy, Dairy Goat Awards Banquet

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — The Chester County 4-H Dairy and Dairy Goat Awards Banquet was conducted Thursday, Nov. 16 at the Goshen Fire Hall.

A buffet style roast beef and ham dinner was served to 120 4-H'ers and their families and friends.

The Manor Dairy Club was in charge of the affair, and various 4-H members conducted the meeting with Rebecca Nolan of Cochranville serving as master of ceremonies.

Russ Albright of Mid-Atlantic Farm Credit gave the group an update on the Romano 4-H Center of Chester County. Another successful 4-H roundup week was conducted in August, including the dairy show, hosting 130 dairy animals. A very successful 4-H Center Benefit Auction was conducted in late September. The money raised at this event will be used to cover current expenses and construct new facilities.

The banquet culminated with entertainment provided by the Chester Valley Dairy Club. Meredith Baily of West Chester hosted "Who Wants to be a Dairy Farmer?," a spinoff of "Who Wants to be a Millionaire?." "Various club members served as contestants and others helped with the "special effects lighting." The skit even included a visit by Cathy Lee Gifford, who was really Kevin Harrop of Chester Springs outfitted in a dress, wig, and high heels.

Dairy goat awards were presented to the high individual project book scores in each club based on the quality and completeness of their book and their performance throughout the 4-H year. Veronica Bates of Gradyville captured the High Achievement Award for the Chester County Kids Club. In the New London Club, Erin Whitesel had the top project award. The Jessica Bohmier Memorial Award for Outstanding Achievement in the Chester County 4-H Dairy Goat Program went to Erin Whitesel. Awards were also presented to the fitting and showing champions and the breed champions from the Chester County 4-H Dairy Goat Roundup last summer.

The top achievement award for dairy based on the total project score was won by Tri-Community member Christy Guest of Pottstown with her Holstein cow project, Century-Oak Tesk Joanie. In conjunction with this award, Christy also received a rotating plaque given by Mildred Seeds of Downingtown, in memory of her parents, George and Mary Seeds. Other achievement award winners included Kaitlyn Kulp of the Tri-Community Dairy Club receiving a first-year trophy. In the Manor Dairy Club, Katie Bates of Gradyville was the winner with Kacie Hershey of Cochranville taking first-year honors. Meredith Baily, West Chester, captured the award in the Chester Valley Club and Emily Neilson of Chatham was the first-year winner.

The Outstanding 4-H Dairy Volunteer Award, established in memory of Ken Brown, a dedicated 4-H dairy parent, was presented to Sharon Nolan of Cochranville. This award was determined from votes cast by the 4-H dairy members.

Production Awards, based on M.E., 305 day records, 2X, were given to the top entries in six breeds. The Ayrshire winner for milk and protein was Pure-Ayr Jalan Donna Marie with 24,062-pounds of milk and 819-pounds of protein, entered by Elizabeth Young of West Grove. Meredith Baily of West Chester won the milk and protein production award for Linebacks with Pocopson Meadow Jewel, delivering 21,217-pounds of milk and 650-pounds of protein. Christy Guest, Pottstown, had the high Holstein for milk and protein, Century-Oak Tesk Joanie, with 33,677-pounds of milk and 1,036-pounds of protein. Erica Lloyd of Pottstown captured the high milk and protein award for Jerseys with ELS Brook Berretta Jaycie, producing 21,476-pounds of milk and 746-pounds of protein. In the Brown Swiss breed, Erica also received the high milk and protein award with Brownwitch Con C Krystal, achieving 26,978-pounds of milk and 806-pounds of protein. Julie Sollenberger of Spring City had the high Guernsey for milk, French Creek Diamond Ann, with 17,334-pounds of milk Trophies were also given out to the 2000 4-H dairy roundup show winners and fitting and showmanship champions.

Christy Guest, Chester County Dairy Achievement Award winner.

Farm Credit awards to dairy members for excellence and leadership in a wide variety of 4-H activities went to Julie Sollenberger of Spring City for the senior award, a $50 savings bond and a $25 cash award went to Julie's brother, Colin Sollenberger, as the junior winner. They were presented by Russ Albright from Mid-Atlantic Farm Credit, ACA, Avondale.

$10.9 Million For Safer Pest Management

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently announced $10.9 million in grants for pest management programs.

"These grants will be used to research safe and effective strategies for managing destructive farm pests," said Glickman.

Grants were awarded in four separate pest management programs.

More than $4.3 million in grants will be awarded to four newly created regional pest management centers to provide an information network that responds quickly to the public's pest management needs. The centers, announced by Glickman in October, include the University of California-Davis, University of Florida, Michigan State University, and Pennsylvania State University. They will partner with USDA to identify, prioritize, coordinate, and facilitate research, education, and extension programs.

More than $3.7 million will fund research at the University of California-Berkeley, the University of Florida, Kansas State University, and Michigan State University to develop safer pest management options in all aspects of crop production from the planted seed to the marketed product.

More than $1.8 million will support the discovery and implementation of pest management alternatives for commodities affected by the methyl bromide phase-out. The awardees include the University of California-Davis, University of California-Riverside, University of Florida, University of Idaho, Michigan State University, and North Carolina State University.

Approximately $1 million will help scientists at the University of Idaho, Iowa State University, University of Massachusetts, Oklahoma State University, and Oregon State University to assess safer pest management options for at-risk crops or cropping systems.

Information on the individual grants is available at http://www.usda.gov/news/releases/2000/12/fy00pest.htm.

PA Agriculture Department Hosts AGRO 2001

HARRISBURG - On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced AGRO 2001, Pennsylvania's international agriculture showcase, will be held Jan. 3 through Jan. 10, 2001, as international guests will be responding to the PA Department of Agriculture's invitation to be in Pennsylvania as the new year begins.

"AGRO 2001 provides the opportunity for Pennsylvania agriculture to show that it has 'Products for the Planet' by featuring the very best of Pennsylvania's number-one industry," said Secretary Hayes.

This event will begin with a welcome for international guests on Thursday, Jan. 4 at a reception in the East Rotunda of the Capitol Building, and will continue on Friday, Jan. 5 with the Trade Show Opening Ceremony at 9:45 AM at the Harrisburg Hilton. Friday's activities will include a very large International Reception and Dinner commencing at 5:00 PM. Continuing for one week thereafter, the PA Department of Agriculture's international guests will be paired with the men and women of Pennsylvania agriculture

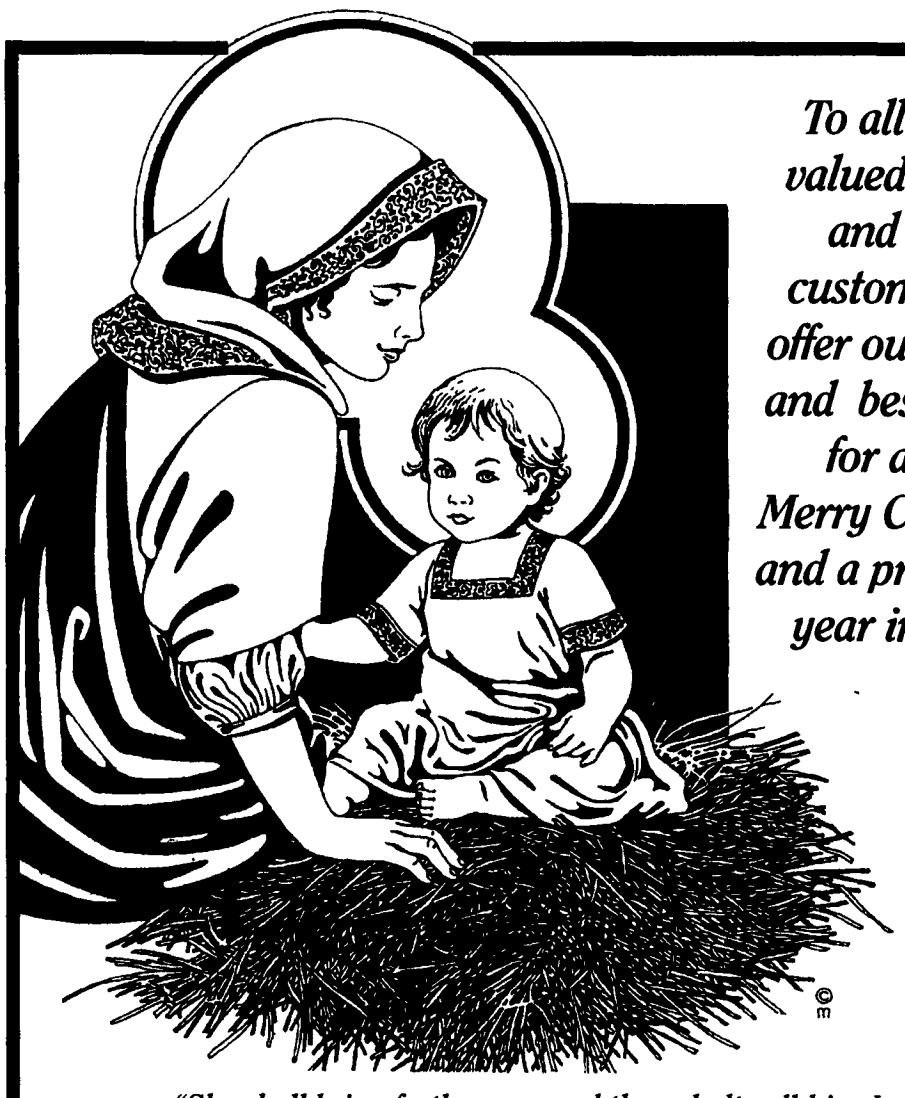
AGRO 2001 is the largest international event in Harrisburg with plans being made to host over 250 guests from more than fifty countries. AGRO 2001 will showcase over 100 'export ready' agribusiness companies at the AGRO Trade Show from all sectors of Pennsylvania agriculture to include foods, hardwoods, machinery, genetics, and agri-technology sectors.

"We are also scheduling hundreds of customized business meetings for our international guests and our Pennsylvania agribusiness people which will help build relationships of mutual benefit between Pennsylvania agriculture and our friends from around the world." Said Secretary Hayes. The business meetings will span the whole AGRO week.

Tickets to the AGRO Reception and Dinner, Friday, Jan. are available for $35 by calling 717-787-6041.

The international guests will also be given the opportunity to attend the Pennsylvania Farm Show on Saturday, Jan 6 2000

For more information on AGRO 2001 contact the Bureau of Market Development at 717-787-6041, or access the Agro 2001 homepage though the PA Department of Agriculture at www.pda state.pa us



To all of our valued friends and loyal customers we offer our thanks and best wishes for a very Merry Christmas and a prosperous year in 2001!

"She shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call him Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins."

West Snyder FFA Members Earn SUN Area Degrees

BEAVER SPRINGS (Snyder Co.) — West Snyder FFA Chapter hosted the SUN Area FFA fall meeting Thursday, Nov. 9 in the high school auditorium.

At the meeting, Chuck Kessler, son of Charles and Jan Kessler of Beavertown, was named Snyder County Star Farmer.

This award is given to the member who has shown premiere leadership and an outstanding supervised occupational experience program in Snyder County. Chuck serves as an assistant officer for the West Snyder FFA Chapter.

Chuck has attended the National FFA Convention where he was a presenter at the National PALS Conference and the Pennsylvania FFA State Legislative Leadership Conference. He has exhibited his dairy animals, as well as his market hogs and lambs at the Beaver Community Fair.

Three West Snyder FFA members also received their SUN Area FFA degrees at the SUN Area FFA fall meeting. Those West Snyder FFA members included Chuck Kessler, Jason Brosius, and Laura Knepp. In order to receive the SUN Area FFA Degree, members must have completed two years of agricultural courses and earned or invested at least $500 or worked at least 300 hours in a supervised agricultural experience (SAE) project. Members must participate in two programs presented to the public and represented the chapter above the area level.

The SUN Area FFA fall meeting was chaired by SUN Area FFA President Kate Heeter of the West Snyder FFA Chapter. Other West Snyder FFA members who serve as SUN Area FFA officers and participated in the meeting include Heather Hollenbach; reporter, Melissa McWilliams; student adviser, and James Wright; chaplain. Heidi Good, a graduate of West Snyder FFA who is serving as north central regional vice president for the Pennsylvania FFA Association, gave a motivational speech to the members at the meeting.

The Honorary SUN Area FFA Degree was presented to Mrs. Jaci Harner, Line Mountain FFA adviser. The West Snyder team which presented the honorary degree included Andrew Kreamer; president, Doug Hollenbach; vice president, Victoria Adams; secretary, Derek Fetterolf; treasurer, Jenna Briggs; reporter, and Tiffany Esbenshade; sentinel.

West Snyder FFA member Chuck Kessler, right, was awarded the Snyder County Star Farmer award recently. He was congratulated by Ken Boyer, West Snyder High School principal.

Great Lakes International Grazing Conference Feb. 12-13

WOOSTER, Ohio — Experienced graziers know that a good pasture offers the right mix of forages to meet the needs of their livestock.

In that sense, the program at the sixth Great Lakes International Grazing Conference, scheduled for Feb. 12-13 at the Shipshewana Antique Auction Barn in Shipshewana, Ind., offers a balanced mixture of topics to meet the needs of beginning and experienced graziers alike, according to Tom Noyes of the Ohio State University Extension and a member of the planning committee for the conference.

The planning committee is comprised of resource people from Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois.

Noyes said that the one of the benefits to conferences such as this one is the fact that graziers not only have access to several key resource people, but it also gives them the opportunity to meet and exchange ideas with other producers.

The conference kicks off Feb. 12 at 1 p.m. and concludes on Feb. 13 at 3 p.m.

The first day is jam-packed with educational information for dairy, beef, and sheep producers.

Topics for dairy producers including managing an expanding grass-based dairy, presented by Bernie Van Dalfsen; an update on the Great Lakes Grazing Network Dairy Economics Project, presented by Tom Kriegl and Bill Bivens, and planning and managing a seasonal dairy presented by David McCartney, Steve Hooley, and Tom Cordes.

Topics for sheep producers include pasture lambing, presented by Janet McNally; predator control, presented by Eric Householder and Dave Schott; and sheep budgets and records, presented by Tom McConnell.

Topics for beef producers include more $$$ from rotational grazing beef cows on fescue, presented by Curt Rincker; managing grazing systems for maximum grazing season: animal considerations, presented by John Johns; and beef stocker grazing for profit, presented by Andy Fadorson.

The first day also features a special session related to the interaction between animals and the grazing process. The session titled "Why Animals Do What They Do" covers topics such as "How Animals See The World Around Them," presented by Dr. Ed Pajor; plant-herbivore interactions by Darrell Emmick; and facilities and handling skills: how to be smarter than a cow, presented by Dr. Ben Bartlett.

Evening activities include dinner and a panel discussion by Janet McNally, Dr. David Zartman, and Troy Bishop, titled "Grazing is More Than Grass."

The second day of the conference gets underway at 6 a.m. with an early bird buffet breakfast and roundtable discussions on topics including rye grass management, marketing, forage budgeting, neighbor's pasture, organic production, and grass-cash.

Following the breakfast and discussion, concurrent breakout sessions introduce potential or beginning graziers to the science and management practices needed for a successful grazing operation and also offer experienced graziers the latest information on grazing practices.

For experienced graziers, the topics include creative grazing, presented by Troy Bishopp and Wendell Miller; fertilizing for profit, presented by Cliff Little; and extending the grazing season, presented by Dr. David Zartman.

Beginning graziers will learn the art and science of grazing during sessions on managing the pasture for yield, quality and persistence by Dr. Keith Johnson; lanes: how many, size, and construction, presented by Tom Noyes; and water: how much do you need, where do you need it, and how do you get it there? presented by Dr. Stephen Hawkins.

The conference wraps up with a general afternoon session covering timely topics for graziers such as soil health and fertility by Dr. Dick Harwood, a GLCI update by Bob Drake and phosphorous supplementation and the environment presented by Tom Noyes.

Also to be presented are grazing riparian areas, presented by Ralph Lantz; carbon sequencing, presenting by John Caveny; and making grass silage, presented by Dr. Keith Bolsen.

The cost of the conference is $65 ($70 after Feb. 7) for the first person from each farm and $55 ($65 after Feb. 7) for each additional person from the farm if the reservations are made prior to Feb. 7. This fee includes registration, breaks, trade show, proceedings, and Tuesday lunch. The (optional) dinner on Monday evening is $15.

Checks should be made payable to LaGrange Soil and Water Conservation District. All fees should be paid in U.S. funds. Registrations should be mailed to Donna Hunter, LaGrange Soil and Water Conservation District, 910 South Detroit Street, LaGrange, IN 46761. Deadline for conference registration is Feb. 7. After that date, contact (219) 463-3471 for registration information.

corn, soybeans, and rye for straw, according to landowners' preferences.

"Some don't want corn because it spoils the view and some want corn for the privacy," said Gail.

Besides fields owned by retired farmers, nonfarm landowners who no longer want to mow their acreage ask the Crookes to mow their fields. Lot size for the suburban houses varies from 3-10 acres.

The couple has spent seven years in Dublin, "probably the most active area in agriculture," said Gail, "the last of the frontier in staving off developers."

Jim, who grew up on a dairy farm in Bucks County, started full time in the haying business in 1979 with custom baling. He began by working for a neighbor and later, after his neighbor passed away, took over the business.

"We've changed the business," said Gail. "For a while there, we did a lot of hay for landscapers for seeding."

The Crookes provided hay for the Blue Route bypass from the turnpike, an airport, prison, and housing developments. Now mushroom growers are main buyers of the hay.

"We started out with small bales and it go to be so much volume, the weather would get bad and it would get wet," said Jim. This hay then went to become mushroom hay.

Ten years ago, when the Crookes purchased a large square baler, marketing swung from feed to mushroom hay. Now 80 percent of the hay acreage goes to mushroom hay buyers to 20 percent for feed hay.

With the ability to make half-ton square bales, the Crookes have doubled their acreage in seven years, a growth they attribute to word-of-mouth advertising. However with suppliers coming from northeastern states and Canada, there is now more competition for mushroom hay, according to Jim.

Pennsylvania is a leading state in mushroom production, making it a ready market. Mushroom growers require the large square bales which are easily loosed to spread for the mushrooms. They also test every load for moisture and subtract weight if the load is more than 20 percent moisture.

The Crookes employ one full-time employee from early spring to late fall.

Hay equipment wheels begin to roll approximately the third week of May and continues until snowy or wet weather closes the season.

"When the weather is good in June and July we make as much feed hay as possible," said Jim, who gets almost double the price for feed hay than mushroom hay. The downside is that the smaller bales take more labor. The large bales are not wrapped but stacked 4-5 bales high and covered with plastic until spring.

The large acreage the Crookes must cover means that many of the fields are only cut once. "We still have 200 acres where we haven't been through the first cutting yet," said Jim.

Even though their schedule is busy, the Crookes still take off every Sunday plus take a summer vacation.

Acreage comes from not only farmers but also suburban homeowners and housing developments. "We have a claim to fame with 400-500 acres in the county which we mowed before they went into development. Our equipment was the last to go over it in farming," said Jim.

"We're still cutting now," said Gail. "With mushroom hay, it does not have to be as green as feeding hay. Jim has baled year-round."

Crooke has put chains on the tractor to bring in the hay.

"We have more than we can handle, but we are losing farmers all the time. There's been quite a bit of an exodus about the last 15 years or so when people got fed up with the hassles of farming in the suburbs and moved elsewhere to farm," said Gail. She pointed out that the agriculture preservation program for the area, however, is growing.

"This may be a short-term scenario," said Gail, who said that it is difficult to plan for the future with the extent of development in the area. "Our son wants to farm and we're not sure if this area is where he should try to farm. There is no way a farmer can buy land here and pay for it farming."

Arsonists have posed a challenge to the Crooke's business. The hay left outside is now stacked smaller to make it less obvious, said Gail.

Gail, a former county 4-H extension agent in Illinois, is now a leader for the Danboro club. The Crooke children participate in 4-H with hogs and a few of the family's 25 ewes.

She helps raking and tedding in the fields, plus "maneuvering and logistics," said Jim. With more than 2,000 acres, 10 different townships, two states and 50 different landowners with fields to cut, the Crookes must plan strategically to have the proper equipment in the right fields, plus fuel and transportation.

"It's a difficult task that he has, determining who is working where, fuel, what trucks to leave in, and how to move equipment," said Gail.

"A lot of it is planned around the weather," said Jim, who tunes in to the weather station every morning. "We always have to be thinking ahead to the next day.

"We work in a circuit. We move step-by-step down the county from township to township," said Jim.

Walkie-talkies have greatly aided the Crookes. "It makes a big difference to be able to call with a change of plans," he said.

The United Parcel Service has also been a big help to hay production as the Crookes can forego long trips to get parts to receive them in the mail the next day.

"I keep everything in my pickup - like baling twine, fuel, grease, oil, or tools. I try to guess ahead as to which part I'm going to need and keep those in stock.

"I also need to know where my support systems are," said Jim, who takes his flat tires or hardware needs to different locations as necessary.

In the fall the Crooks provide for several hay mazes. Customers design their own maze by gluing blocks on plywood. The template is placed on the fender of the loader tractor and the maze is built on the pattern.

They have dealt with six or seven fires over the years. Not only smaller piles of hay but also dispersing the piles onto several farms helps keep arson risk lower.

During the winter Jim will be busy hauling the piles of hay.

Transporting equipment from area to area is also a challenge. A sicklebar-type mower folds up to the width of the tractor. The Crookes also have carefully scoped the bridges in the area that can handle the height and weight of the equipment.

Jim pulls the hay rakes and tedder with a pickup and a low bed transports the tractor. "It's never more than a couple of miles to the next field," he said.

Traveling around the surrounding area to various hayfields has given Jim a thorough knowledge of the area in perhaps an unusual way. "I actually think of the county in terms of the ridges, hills, creeks, the lay of the land, almost more than roads," he said.

Crooke moves the half-ton bales, probably destined for a mushroom grower, to a flatbed trailer. "With these big bales they're actually packed so tight they don't soak up water," said Crooke. Thirty-bale loads may equal 15-19 tons of hay moving down the road.

Ken Stoop, New Hope, a longtime employee of the Crookes, pulls two rakes through the late-fall fields.

Farm Management

MARKETING 2000 AND 2001 PRODUCTION

John Berry
Lehigh County
Ag Marketing Agent

I see very few crops still in the field. The cows are off pasture. Machinery is put away. Most doors and windows are being kept shut. It is the beginning of a less hectic season. We might even contemplate the past year and plan for the coming year.

Farmers tend to be conservative politically, philosophically, and emotionally. This is natural. Making a living in the face of weather, price, and government uncertainty is risky business. There is no need to seek additional excitement. This has lead to an increasing interest in marketing.

The past couple of years have presented significant marketing challenges. Lack of rain, too much heat, low prices, too much rain, not enough sun, low prices, increasing competition, and low prices are causing growers to consider developing a more substantial plan for actively marketing their production. Using traditional marketing methods has come up short lately.

Producers understand the need to concentrate on marketing. The challenge is developing a flexible marketing plan that uses appropriate tools and controls emotional decisions. Following the market closely, quickly reveals that prices cannot be predicted with total success. We can study the past and the present, and then apply this knowledge to the future, but there are limitations.

Marketing has a vocabulary that is unrelated to our everyday activities. Sometimes it seems marketing involves doing the exact opposite of what is logical. The available marketing alternatives have distinct advantages and disadvantages that must be understood before a thoughtful plan can be developed. The farm financial situation, attitude toward risk, and level of marketing knowledge are additional factors affecting development of a usable plan.

All costs must be considered when developing a marketing strategy. Interest rates, shrinkage, fees, advisers, transportation, lost opportunity, and cash requirements need to be considered. Marketing can be successful without using the futures markets, but understanding the futures market can be powerful. Local prices are nearly a direct result of what happens at the various boards of trade.

Prices can change from week to week. It is easy to concentrate on a single sale that resulted in a below-average price. Try using a yearly pricing summary. The idea is to follow the value of total or expected production. Cash sales, forward pricing, futures activities, and government payments all contribute to farm revenue.

Many people would like to think there is a secret formula to making marketing decisions, but it does not exist! Successful marketing requires time and patience. The longer and harder you work at it, the better you will become. In an effort to increase farmer's marketing knowledge, the Lehigh Valley Grain Marketing Club is sponsoring a marketing seminar on Jan. 23 near Allentown.

Bob Utterback is the featured speaker. Utterback is a registered commodity broker and president of Utterback Marketing Services, Inc. in New Richmond, Ind. He provides overall technical and fundamental marketing outlooks and he and his staff implement trades for farms and farm related organizations. You can read his outlooks in Farm Journal magazine and daily marketing comments at http://www.utterback.com

Paul Knight will also be giving a presentation. Knight is the Pennsylvania climatologist. He is an instructor of meteorology at Penn State and manages the Weather Communications Group. Knight has been the senior forecaster for The New York Times since 1986. Paul is also the producer, co-host, and on-camera meteorologist for WPSX-TV's Weather World.

During this seminar, we will be discussing the economic and political environment, federal farm policy, fundamental factors affecting agriculture, developing a marketing plan, trends, volatility, cash flow, emotions, weather, and world agricultural output. Everyone is invited to attend this excellent educational activity.

Safely Store Garden Chemical Products

COLUMBUS, Ohio — As snowy mornings draw closer, gardeners are putting away summer tools. These tools may include garden chemicals and pesticides used to fight insects and weeds during the growing season.

Gardeners are encouraged to take time to evaluate their storage methods to protect their families and pets, said Joanne Kick-Raack, coordinator of the Pesticide Education Program, part of Ohio State University Extension.

"Garden chemicals and pesticides should be stored out of reach of children and pets ideally in a locked cabinet," Kick-Raack said. "Pesticides should be stored in the original container with the original label attached. Storing pesticides in another container, such as an empty soda pop or food bottle, is confusing and could cause an adult or child to ingest the product."

Kick-Raack emphasizes keeping containers in a dry area to prevent corrosion or possible leakage. Containers should be sealed tightly and stored separately from food, seed, fertilizer and other products.

"Safety should be the first priority when handling and storing pesticides," she said.

The labels on pesticide products also provide information for storage, Kick-Raack said. Some products may need to be stored in a controlled area to avoid freezing or excessive heat. Another safety tip is to avoid stockpiling pesticides.

"Storage needs can be reduced if homeowners buy only the amount of garden chemicals and pesticides they need for the growing season," she said.

For more information about storing and disposing of garden chemicals, contact your county extension office or the Pesticide Education Program at (614) 292-4070.

On Apples And Stone Fruit

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — "It's a rough situation out there, marketwise, for agriculture,' said Dennis Mackey, organic apple grower, organic fruit purchaser for Eden Foods, and experimental stone fruit grower.

But Mackey, who hails from Kaleva in lower Michigan's northwest corner, has found a niche for himself in the organic fruit market. He will be on hand at the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture's (PASA's) February conference for two workshops to share some of what he's learned about successful growing and marketing.

He's been growing apples organically since the late 1980s, and has an experimental block of organic stone fruit, so he knows the difficulties associated with organic fruit production.

It's because of the length of the growing season, as compared to that of vegetables and other crops, and the pests involved, he said. From April to harvest in October or November, it's a long time for insects and disease to gain a foothold.

"There are a ton of things (bugs and diseases) out there as soon as the first green shows," Mackey said.

For his organic apple growing workshop he will discuss weed and disease control, specific products which can be used, and give his views on "what I think the market is now." The workshop on growing organic stone fruit will focus on his work with the experimental block of stone fruit and where growers can find information.

Mackey had an experimental block of stone fruit in Wisconsin for several years, where he worked with a variety of sprays and pruning systems, and tested the hardiness of root stocks. This spring he plans to establish two varieties of white peaches at his family's farm in Kaleva.

Mackey in the first to acknowledge that growing fruit organically is not easy. But he believes strongly in its importance and that of sustainable agriculture practices.

"Basically, the world is contaminated," he said. "But it hasn't always been this way. This is a way of growing fruit like our grandfathers did."

And when the apple scab and insects have been conquered, there remains the complex issue of marketing. There is a kind of Catch-22 situation out there, he said. Eden Foods, for example, is willing to make organic food-based products but are not always sure they can get the raw materials. But overproduction is not the answer, either.

"People need to be open for new marketing opportunities," he said. As more and more people get into the organic business, that will probably even the prices out. Overall (now) there is still a premium to be had in the organic market."

For those interested in producing healthy fruit in a sustainable way, plan to attend Mackey's workshops at PASA's 10th annual Farming For The Future Conference in State College, Feb. 9 and 10.

Community Program Now Online

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — People who care about the future of rural and developing communities now have two educational opportunities in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

A master's degree and a graduate level advanced certificate in community and economic development are being offered at the University Park campus. The advanced certificate also will be offered online through Penn State's World Campus beginning in January.

"Students will improve their decision-making skills in how to empower local communities to make their own decisions and how to improve the social and economic well-being of individual citizens," said Drew Hyman, professor of public policy and community systems and senior faculty coordinator for the programs.

"Graduates will be prepared to work for public, nonprofit, or private organizations that deal with development issues in America's towns, boroughs, small cities, community organizations, neighborhoods, and rural areas.

"While many universities focus attention on larger urban and metropolitan areas, this is an applied multidisciplinary program that draws on the rural and agricultural expertise of our faculty," Hyman said. "These issues may include developing new organizations and industries, growth management, protecting the environment, revitalizing downtown areas and neighborhoods, and assisting educational, social, health and human service systems."

The master's program requires 35 credits, including an internship or field project leading to a paper or thesis. Students must complete a core program of required courses in economic development and leadership, rural organization, economic planning, statistics and research methods and land use, as well as electives tailored to their individual plan of study.

The World Campus certificate program requires 13 credits consisting of four three-credit courses and a one-credit integrative project/paper. Courses will be delivered through the Internet, e-mail, print media, and CD-ROM. Five core courses are shared with the resident master's program, so learners already working in the field can begin their master's degree without leaving home or work.

For more information on the master's degree in community and economic development, contact Drew Hyman at (814) 863-8655 or visit the World Wide Web at www.aers.psu.edu/cedev/index.htm. For more information on the World Campus certificate program, call (800) 252-3592 or visit www.worldcampus.psu.edu.

Tomato Variety Appears To Resist Bacterial Disease

WOOSTER, Ohio — Ohio State University researchers have developed a tomato variety that appears to resist bacterial spot, one of three major diseases in Ohio that wreak havoc on the crop.

David Francis, Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center researcher, said that the study, following three years of development, is in its second year of yield tests and shows promising enough results to move into the pre-commercial stage. "The tomatoes are holding up pretty well to the disease. We consider it a partial resistance, not a full immunity," said Francis. "But we could release a variety as early as next year with commercial seed available by 2002." Sally Miller, OARDC plant pathologist and a researcher from the University of Florida are also participating in the study.

Bacterial spot, caused by the bacterium Xanthomonas campestris pv. vesicatoria, attacks tomato plants under moist environmental conditions. In addition to attacking the leaves, bacterial spot also causes spotting, blemishing, and distortion of the fruit, reducing its marketability and palatability.

Exact monetary crop loss in Ohio caused by bacterial spot is not known, but Francis estimates that approximately 10 percent of the state's $20 million annual processing tomato crop is lost to bacterial spot, as well as bacterial speck and bacterial canker, two other major diseases in Ohio. "It depends on the disease, environmental conditions and a grower's crop," said Francis. 'Losses can range from 10 percent to 80 percent for an individual."

OARDC research on bacterial spot spawned from a survey of growers and processors, who named bacterial spot as one of the most important diseases in Ohio, said Francis. "A couple of fungal diseases were included on the list, but other people were already working on those," he said. "Research has been done on bacterial spot before, but this is the first time we've strung the whole process together to get a variety."

The researchers focused on a Hawaiian tomato line that exhibits multiple bacterial resistance, including bacterial spot. Using DNA market technology similar to that used in forensics, the researchers identified and selected disease-resistant genes in the Hawaiian line. By subsequently crossbreeding the Hawaiian line with a tomato variety adapted to Ohio growing conditions, the researchers were able to develop over 100 tomato varieties that exhibited resistance to bacterial spot. Out of the original population and subsequent generations, four varieties were chosen for their resistance to bacterial spot while maintaining the horticultural characteristics necessary for marketing success.

"The quality of the fruit is the biggest concern. These varieties passed that hurdle," said Francis, adding that the tomatoes also exhibit traits, such as high yield, excellent color, and a balanced sugar and citric acid content.

The researchers have planted and studied the varieties in several areas, including Wooster, Ohio, Fremont, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, and Canada. "It's easy for me to see faults in the varieties that I want to make improvements on," said Francis. "But we've really done something here. We've added extra value to the seed that other varieties don't have."

The researchers are also currently conducting tomato studies on bacterial speck and bacterial canker.

2001 Environmental Award Program Begins Accepting Applications

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Nominations are now open for an award that recognizes leaders in natural resource management, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association said recently. Through March 7, anyone can nominate competitors for the 2001 Environmental Stewardship Award Program, which honors cattle producers whose business practices contribute to the environment while enhancing productivity and profitability.

Sponsored by Dow AgroSciences, the Environmental Stewardship Award Program (ESAP) is in its 11th year. Nominees will first compete for one of seven regional awards. The winners will later compete for the national award. The only requirement for nominees is that they raise or feed cattle.

"Winners of the award engage in business practices that are above and beyond normal practices," said Bob Lee, co-chair of the ESAP selection committee. "Their practices are also ones that others can emulate while protecting and enhancing their bottom lines."

A selection committee made up of 14 people from wildlife, environmental, agriculture and land management organizations chooses the winners. The committee bases its decision on the use of natural resource stewardship practices that contribute to the environment and enhance productivity and profitability. Innovative management and conservation practices in energy, water, air, vegetation, wildlife and soil management are also considered.

Some past winners of the ESAP award were recognized for exemplary practices in groundwater protection, land improvement, wildlife enhancement, diversifying native range, cropping and feedlot operation, progressive agriculture and minimizing soil erosion.

To obtain an application, visit http:/hill.beef.org/esap/index.html or contact Walt Smith at wsmith@beef.org, (202) 347-0228.

Genome Coup Opens Door To New Discoveries

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Now that the history-making venture to decipher the structure of nearly all the genes in a little mustard family plant called thale cress or mouse ear cress is complete, plant researchers are intent on finding out what job each of those 25,000 genes performs.

"This remarkable accomplishment," said U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, "may pave the way for increasing agricultural productivity by improving crop yields and quality to help maintain a global food supply and protect the environment."

Among the investigators pursuing that ambitious goal is Athanasios Theologis, a senior scientist with the Agricultural Research Service in Albany, Calif., and adjunct professor at the University of California, Berkeley.

Theologis co-authored one of several research papers in the December 14 issue of the journal "Nature" that document his team's success — and that of co-investigators — in elucidating the structure, or "sequence," of all of the genes in the diminutive plant known to botanists as Arabidopsis thaliana. Researchers finished the project three years ahead of schedule.

Theologis is based at the Plant Gene Expression Center, which is jointly operated by ARS and the University of California. The Arabidopsis sequencing work that is considered to be the first complete, publicly available catalog of the structure of all of the genes that come into play during the life of a flowering plant — from seed to flower to fruit.

Scientists hope to discover the traits that these genes control, such as resistance to attack by insects or diseases. Once those genes are identified, scientists may be able to shuttle them into plants that lack natural protection, or they may be able to retool the genes to enhance their effectiveness

Arabidopsis has been the guinea pig for these gene-sequence investigations because it has a much smaller amount of genetic material than familiar crop plants such as corn or wheat. Knowing the structure and the function of Arabidopsis genes helps reveal clues to the form and function of genes in all flowering plants, as well as genes of other forms of life.

Theologis worked with scientists at Stanford University and at the University of Pennsylvania to determine the sequence of the genes of one of the five chromosomes in Arabidopsis. Investigators in the United States, Europe, and Japan sequenced four other Arabidopsis chromosomes.

USDA's Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service helped fund the work.

Checkoff Capitalizes On Demand For Beef

DENVER, Colo. — The Beef Promotion Operating Committee recommended the largest budget amendment ever for demand-building programs at a meeting Dec. 6.

The $6,642,000 fiscal 2001 budget amendment will be used to support checkoff-funded beef promotion, research, consumer information and foreign marketing efforts. These funds resulted from three sources: 1) the amount by which FY2000 record checkoff revenue exceeded projections; 2) the amount by which the Beef Board's administrative expenses came in under budget; and 3) a number of Beef Board projects that were completed for less than the amounts approved.

"The amendment, and the plan for fiscal 2001, is focused on helping the industry continue to build beef demand," said Beef Board Chairman Les McNeill, who serves as Chairman of the Operating Committee. McNeill is a cattle feeder from Panhandle, Texas. "Beef demand for the third quarter of 2000 was up about 6 percent when compared to the third quarter of 1999. And for the first time ever, consumer expenditures for beef in 2000 are predicted to exceed $53 billion, an increase of $3 billion from 1999. After nearly two decades of decline, demand has been on a upswing for nearly two years."

The recommended budget amendment includes funding for Promotion, $1,870,000; Research, $2,585,000; Consumer Information, $1,800,000 and Foreign Marketing, $387,000.

"The budget amendment includes funds for additional beef safety and nutrition research," said McNeill. "Research is a long term commitment of checkoff dollars to assure consumer confidence in beef. It's important to develop the science to support the nutritional benefits of beef and the science to enhance beef's safety and eating quality."

In other action the Operating Committee approved an Authorization Request for $185,000 from the U.S. Meat Export Federation for additional beef promotion efforts in the Japanese market. Japan is the largest market for U.S. beef. It also approved a $70,000 Authorization Request from the American National CattleWomen to support the National Beef Ambassador Program. The Ambassador program involves training young spokespersons to deliver messages about beef and the industry to consumer audiences.

The Operating Committee was created to bring state and national beef checkoff dollars together. The Operating Committee approves checkoff program plans and contractors.

Programs authorized by the Operating Committee must be approved by the USDA before work can be done. Contractors with the Cattlemen's Beef Board work on a cost recovery basis. They are reimbursed after work is done and the out-of-pocket expenses are incurred and do not to make a profit.

May you and your family experience the joy, love and peace that is the true meaning of Christmas.

During this season our thoughts turn gratefully to those who make our business possible.

A very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all of you!

Grower Grooms

said Shealer on a recent visit to his farm.

The trees are located in one patch that Shealer, extension director for Carbon County, was "saving to put together for a seed orchard."

He joked to family and friends about the patch that "I'd put a tree in the White House someday," said Shealer. "'Oh, yeah,' some would say. But I groomed that tree for 6-7 years just to put in the White House."

In 2000, Shealer won the grand champion tree at the Farm Show in Harrisburg. That allowed him to qualify for competition at the National Christmas Tree Growers Association Convention in Rochester, N.Y.

In August, Shealer submitted his best tree and won at the contest.

"I've never competed at the national level," he said.

Shealer won a grand champion at the Farm Show in 1992, but because the national show was in Spokane, Wash. that year, the distance prevented Shealer from entering.

"I enjoy competing with my trees," Shealer said.

He grows several just to obtain that handful of "genetically superior specimens.

"They get extra care," he said. "They're fertilized separately, they're hand-sheared and butt-pruned."

Shealer uses a commercial or specially made fertilizer mix depending on soil test recommendations, applied every spring and fall. He soil tests every three years.

Shealer believes in an all-in, all-cut management strategy on each of the 50 acres in production. Instead of cutting select trees, all trees are taken at once to keep the fields clean, disease-free, and to ensure maximum fertility.

In the spring, a preemergent herbicide is used to keep annual weeds down. In the fall, a post program takes care of all perennial weeds.

The farm's hills include a Berks shaley loam with good drainage. Shealer had to weather the 1999 drought, which led to the deaths of hundreds of new seedlings.

But fortunately, not as many trees had to be replaced as Shealer first suspected.

This year growing conditions were ideal. An irrigation well installed in May 2000 wasn't needed.

Shealer grows trees from 5 feet to 18 feet in height. They include Douglas, Fraser, and concolor firs, Norway Spruce, Colorado Blue Spruce, Canaan Fir, White Pine, and Scotch Pine. About 75-80 percent of all tree sales are Fraser or Douglas firs.

Shealer sells mostly wholesale and some retail. Retail sales are at the barn. The cut trees are placed on strand-straight boards in a pin. Customers arrive from all over southeast Pennsylvania, including West Chester, Chester, Fleetwood, Leesport, and Reading.

The herbicide program is careful to keep weed pressure low. "If I had to grow trees in weeds, I wouldn't want to grow them," Shealer said.

One tree had three feet of growth in one season.

Shealer said two challenges include deer, which destroy trees either by eating or "buck rubbing," and outright theft of trees.

He lost 75 trees in one night to theft. The farm is on constant police patrol.

Shealer knows of one grower who lost 3,000 Fraser fir trees by deer browsing.

"We hunted very hard here," he said. "We kill a lot of deer in season."

In Carbon County alone, growers lost 8,000 trees to deer damage.

First Woman Named National Ag Secretary

roots within the agriculture community and has gained significant experience managing agriculture affairs at both the state and federal levels. From 1995 to 1999, she served as secretary of the California Department of Food and Agriculture, directing the state agency that oversees the largest agricultural economy in the nation. Vereman also served as Deputy Secretary of USDA from 1991 to 1993 in then President Bush's administration. As the second ranking person in the department at that time, she directed and oversaw 42 agencies with a budget of more than $60 billion and a workforce of 11,000 employees.

Raised on a peach farm, Veneman has an extensive background in international trade and made it a priority to expand global opportunities for California agriculture. Many officials of farm organizations have expressed the belief that this trade background makes Veneman a good choice for the cabinet position.

"I think Ann Veneman is a great choice for Secretary of Agriculture," said Stephen Censky, chief executive officer of the American Soybean Association. "Clearly, Ann knows agriculture very well. She has spent her whole career in agriculture working for farmers and ranchers both at the Department of Agriculture as well as Commissioner of Agriculture in California."

Guy Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, also applauded the news of Veneman's selection. "From her experience in prior government positions, Farm Bureau knows Veneman to be an extremely knowledgeable, capable and effective advocate for all of agriculture," Donaldson said. "She knows how USDA works and the range of responsibilities she will have to oversee. In particular, Farm Bureau is impressed with her experience in the international trade area. Her nomination signals that President-elect Bush plans to follow through on his campaign pledges to open new markets for American agriculture."

Veneman earned a bachelor's degree from the University of California at Davis; a master's degree in public policy from the University of California at Berkley; and a law degree from the University of California, Hastings College of Law. She will be leaving her present position as a partner in the law firm of Nossaman, Guthner, Knox, and Elliott.

Beef Rib Roast With Mustard-Pepper Rub and Horseradish Mashed Potatoes

Roasted Potato Crostini With Pesto Cheese

Total preparation and cooking time: 35 minutes Makes 8 servings.

- 1-1/3 pounds potatoes (about 4 medium), unpeeled, cut into 1/2-inch thick slices
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic salt, divided
- 3/4 cup (6 ounces) soft cream cheese
- 1/4 cup prepared basil pesto sauce
- 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon red pepper sauce (optional)
- 1/4 cup finely chopped roasted red peppers
- Snipped fresh chives or minced green onion

1. Heat oven to 400°F. Spray baking sheet with nonstick cooking spray; arrange potatoes in single layer. Spray potatoes lightly with additional cooking spray, sprinkle with 1/4 teaspoon of the garlic salt.
2. Roast in 400°F oven 20 to 25 minutes or until potatoes are tender and browned, turning potatoes over and sprinkling with remaining 1/4 teaspoon garlic salt after 10 to 12 minutes.
3. Meanwhile combine cream cheese, pesto sauce and red pepper sauce, if desired, in small bowl. Pipe or spoon about 2 teaspoons cheese mixture onto each potato slice. Top with roasted peppers; sprinkle with chives.

Cook's Tip: To prepare up to 1 day ahead, bake potatoes and prepare cheese mixture; cover and refrigerate separately. Before serving, heat potatoes in microwave oven. Assemble as directed above.

Horseradish Mashed Potatoes

Total preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes Makes 8 servings (3/4-cup each).

- 2-3/4 pounds potatoes (about 8 medium), peeled, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 4 cloves garlic, peeled, whole
- 2 teaspoons salt, divided
- 1/2 to 3/4 cup heavy cream
- 1/4cup (1/2 stick) butter, cut into pieces
- 3 to 4 tablespoons prepared horseradish
- 3/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 cup chopped green onions or snipped chives

1. Bring 2 inches of water to a boil in large saucepan. Add potatoes, garlic and 1/2 teaspoon of the salt; return to a boil. Reduce heat to medium; cover and cook 12 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Drain.
2. Cook potatoes and garlic over medium-low heat 1 minute to evaporate excess moisture, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat. Mash potatoes and garlic with electric hand mixer or manual potato masher until smooth.
3. Add 1/2 cup cream, butter, horseradish, 1-1/2 teaspoons salt, and pepper; stir until blended. Add additional cream, 1 tablespoon at a time, if necessary for desired consistency. Stir in green onions.

Cook's Tip: Recipe may be doubled.

Beef Rib Roast With Mustard-Pepper Rub

Total preparation and cooking time: 2-3/4 to 3-1/2 hours Makes 8 to 10 servings.

- 1 well-trimmed beef rib roast (2 to 4 ribs), small end, chine (back) bone removed (6 to 8 pounds)

Rub:
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
- 2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
- 1 tablespoon mixed black, white, green and pink peppercorns or black peppercorns, cracked
- 2 large cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon salt

1. Heat oven to 350°F. Combine rub ingredients in small bowl; press evenly onto all surfaces of beef roast.
2. Place roast, fat-side up, in shallow roasting pan. Insert ovenproof meat thermometer so tip is centered in thickest part of beef, not resting in fat or touching bone. Do not add water or cover. Roast in 350°F oven 2-1/4 to 2-1/2 hours for medium rare; 2-3/4 to 3 hours for medium doneness.
3. Remove roast when meat thermometer registers 135°F for medium rare; 150°F for medium doneness. Transfer roast to carving board; tent loosely with aluminum foil. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes. (Temperature will continue to rise about 10°F to reach 145°F for medium rare; 160°F for medium.) Carve roast into slices.

Cook's Tip: Recipe makes enough rub for a 6 to 8-pound roast. Try rub on other beef roasts, roasting as directed in the chart (below).

Simply Sensational

'Tis the season for celebration—and wonderful meals that are simple to prepare, sensational to eat.

When two of America's favorites—beef and potatoes—are the menu stars, simply sensational is the result. They taste great, they're easy to cook—perfect partners, holiday or any day.

For a unique menu starter, serve Roasted Potato Crostini With Pesto Cheese, a creative combination of roasted potato slices topped with a savory mixture of cream cheese, prepared pesto and colorful red peppers.

A beef rib roast is the classic holiday entrée. It's made even more delicious with a mustard-parsley-peppercorn coating. The meal wouldn't be complete without fluffy mashed potatoes. This classic side dish becomes a holiday dazzler with the simple addition of horseradish, garlic and green onions.

Remember, simple and sensational. The holidays happen but once a year!

MARVELOUS MASHED POTATOES

Everybody loves mashed potatoes! For fluffier potatoes, return drained, cooked potatoes to the pot and heat them briefly to dry out. For country-style potatoes, mash them with the skins on. To mash potatoes, use a hand-held potato masher, ricer, food mill or electric mixer. Avoid the food processor which can make them gummy. In a time crunch? Use convenience potato products, such as frozen, refrigerated or instant mashed potatoes.

Try some of the seasoning suggestions below.

- Olive Oil Mashed Potatoes—For a fruity flavor, try adding a little extra-virgin olive oil in place of some of the butter.
- Pesto Swirled Potatoes—Spoon freshly made mashed potatoes into a large serving bowl. Using a spoon, partially stir in prepared pesto to create a swirl design.
- Cheddar Mashed Potatoes—Stir sour cream and shredded Cheddar cheese into hot mashed potatoes.
- Balsamic Mashed Potatoes—Drizzle a little balsamic vinegar into your mashed potatoes for a little zip—a perfect match for a juicy beef steak!

BEEF ROAST BASICS

This holiday season, follow these tips to a perfect roast.

What size beef roast? Call your meat retailer in advance and order the type and size holiday roast you need. Plan 4 to 6 ounces of cooked beef per serving for "holiday helpings" rather than the traditional 3-ounce cooked, trimmed portion. (See roasting chart to determine size.)

How to select? Look for a bright cherry-red color. If vacuum-packaged, the beef has a darker, more purplish-red color; when exposed to air, it turns a bright red color. Beef should be firm to the touch, in cold packages without holes or tears.

How to store? Store roasts unopened in the coldest part of the refrigerator, up to 3 to 4 days. For longer storage, freeze 6 to 12 months at 0°F or colder, wrapped in heavy-duty aluminum foil or placed in freezer bags.

Baffled by doneness? Cooking times are only a guide. Use a thermometer for accuracy.

Carving tip. Let roasts stand 15 to 20 minutes before carving; during standing the roast firms up making carving easier.

1-2-3 EASY HOLIDAY BEEF ROASTS

There's a beef roast to fit every size gathering and every palate. The roasts below are popular holiday choices. To ensure a perfect roast, follow these three easy steps:

1. Heat oven to temperature specified in chart.
2. Place roast, fat-side up, on rack in shallow roasting pan. Season as desired. Insert ovenproof meat thermometer so tip is centered in thickest part of roast, not resting in fat or touching bone. Do not add water. Do not cover.
3. Roast according to chart. Transfer roast to carving board; tent loosely with aluminum foil. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes. (Temperature will continue to rise 5° to 10°F to reach desired doneness.)

Make The Holiday Magic Last Longer

Christmas is here! Rejoice!

A wonderful time of celebration, thankfulness, and sharing with ones we love.

This beautiful day, along with the preceding weeks of anticipation and preparation, is often a magical time for children and adults alike.

Once the holiday season has passed, however, many people, young and old, find themselves feeling rather "blue." This is not unusual, because the post-holiday period can be a letdown.

Balloon Has Popped

Family members may be returning to homes far away. Decorations must be packed and returned to storage. The children are restless — caught in limbo between Santa Claus's coming and getting back to school to see their friends. It's almost as if a balloon has popped!

What can be done to prolong the festive, warm feeling of the Christmas season, yet still readjust to the normal everyday routine? Is there anything that can be done to make the magic last a little longer?

Giving is an important part of Christmas. It is also a gesture that can be continued throughout the year. With so many children receiving new toys at Christmas, now is a time to clean out toy boxes and closets.

Toys which are no longer used or interesting may be donated to your church or favorite charity. These toys will be a welcome gift to a less fortunate child and give your child the joy of making some other child happy.

Too Many Toys

Many children receive an enormous array of toys at Christmas. To help excitement over toys last longer than a few days, try this:

After the initial excitement with new gifts has worn off, ask your child to choose his/her favorite three or four. Let him keep these to play with. Put the others in storage.

These "hidden" gifts can then be taken out at regular intervals throughout the winter, making for great excitement. Children will be far more interested in these toys than if they'd had them all at once.

Children need to learn to show appreciation and the holiday season is a perfect time for this. The days following Christmas are ideal for writing thank-you notes. Even the youngest child can be involved in this endeavor by making a drawing and having a parent write out what he dictates.

Snapshots are fun to enclose in thank-you notes. A child who writes Grandma and Grandpa to say "thank you" for the red sweater can include a picture of herself wearing the sweater. What a special way to say thanks!

Taking decorations down and getting the house back in order need not be drudgery. It can also be made a family affair. It is fun to safely tuck two or three special snapshots taken on Christmas day into the box decorations are stored in. That way, when you get the decorations out next year, you'll have some happy memories of last Christmas to talk about as you decorate the tree.

While these suggestions are not meant to be the cure-all for post-Christmas blues, they may help lift your spirits. Be creative! Develop your own post-holiday traditions which will be meaningful and memorable.

If your family has something to look forward to after Christmas, the after-Christmas letdown can be replaced with other activities.

Relax and enjoy a Merry Christmas!

It's time to hang it up.

Hang up the bright icicle lights across the porch, out the wreaths, hang up all the pretty holiday cards we've received. Hang up the bells and the bows and the brightly-shining baubles.

Time to hang up the cows.

What? You don't hang up cows?

Well, get with it. It's the Christmas-cow season.

Our Christmas-cow decorations are a tradition of the season in our farmhouse. They're especially precious because each one reminds us of the friend or family member who gifted it to us.

So now our six-foot-tall, potted Norfolk Island Pine (which scrapes the ceiling of the greenhouse where it winters after holiday engagements), is once again decked out with tiny white lights illuminating the assorted, colorful members of our Christmas herd.

There are cows on tiny, red skis. Cows with minuscule Swiss-style bells around their necks. Bejeweled cows. Wicker cows. Solid cows carved of wood. Shiny, ceramic cows. Sparkling metal cows. Soft-hided cows. Paper cow streamers. A cow which preens itself in a lighted, Hollywood-star-type mirror.

And, of course, the carved wooden cow which is part of our quarter-century-old manger scene.

Cards with cows — sent by both farm and nonfarm friends — are lined up for display on one countertop. A stuffed, cow-fabric tree decorated with red pom-poms has, as grandson Caleb gleefully chuckles, "cows all over." And a delightful wall hanging, creation of the same nimble-fingered maker as the stuffed tree, brightens our kitchen with a cheery holiday farm of all sorts of animals complimenting the focal centerpiece, which is — are you surprised? — a black and white cow.

The Christmas herd is not a tradition we ever purposely set out to acquire. It has "reproduced" on its own over the years, enhancing the assorted cow-paraphernalia which personalizes our home year-round.

And it wouldn't be the holiday season without them.

So, as you celebrate the season in whatever way is traditional at your house, don't forget to sing an occasional burst of our favorite holiday song about our bovine friends.

Consuming Thoughts

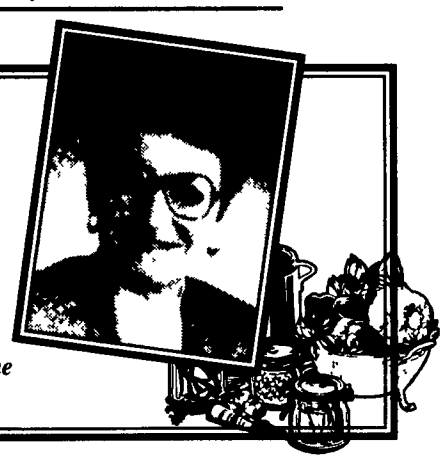
Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



To many Americans, the holiday season means family feasts and celebrating with good friends. But overindulgence at Thanksgiving, Hanukkah and Christmas often leads to a New year's resolution to lose weight.

This year, resolve to maintain a healthy lifestyle and still enjoy the festivities. It's easier than it sounds.

For example, the traditional centerpiece of most holiday tables is a plump, roasted turkey — an excellent low-calorie, low-fat main course. There are only 163 calories in a three-ounce serving of white meat without the skin. But use good judgment when buying the bird. Some self-basting turkeys are injected with oil high in saturated fat and sodium. Choose a plain frozen turkey instead, or check the labels for a self-basting brand that uses unsaturated vegetable oils.

Turkey isn't the only admissible entree. For those who prefer something a little different, Cornish hens might be the answer. Wild duck and pheasant are acceptably lean, as are partridge, quail and other small birds. Venison is very lean, and rabbit, possessing a flavor akin to chicken, has only a fraction of chicken's fat. The American Heart Association Cookbook has several tasty game recipes.

Try not to offset the heart healthiness of the main course by going overboard on the trimmings. Learn to make a low-fat gravy, and say "no" to that extra helping of dressing. Vegetables are practically fat-free and low in calories, so don't be bashful about asking for seconds. But the calorie conscious should know that butter and cream sauces add unnecessary fat and cholesterol. Flavor with garlic, onion, lemon juice, herbs or spices instead.

The good news is, there's no reason to skip dessert. Simply use a few tricks to make cookies, cakes and pies that taste great, but have less fat and cholesterol. For example, substitute evaporated skim milk for evaporated milk, use two egg whites instead of one whole egg (two egg whites +one teaspoon vegetable oil = one whole egg), and choose low-fat toppings over whipped cream. And don't forget that a simple bowl of mixed fruit is a natural way to satisfy the sweet tooth.

Even if major holiday meals are under control, there is great temptation to nibble at office parties, neighborhood gatherings and family reunions. A smart snacker passes up baked goods and highly salted nuts and chips in favor of raw vegetables or fruit treats. Party-goers who can't resist the former should get involved in a stimulating conversations as far from the food table as possible.

New Weigh Of Life Classes Set

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If you're planning on improving your health or losing weight in the new millennium, you can attain your resolution in classes offered by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Lancaster County.

You'll learn how to make simple changes in your eating and activity habits to reduce high levels of blood pressure and cholesterol. Borderline diabetics can also benefit.

Small improvements can make a big difference in your health. Both day and evening classes will be offered beginning the week of Jan. 15 at the Farm and Home Center, as well as the Conestoga Valley Community Center near Leola. The cost is $70 ($55 for each additional family member) which is covered by many insurance plans.

The workshop at the Farm and Home Center will be from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. on Tuesdays, Jan. 16, 23, 30, Feb. 6, 13, 20, 27, March 6, 13, 20, and 27.

The workshop at the Conestoga Valley Community Center will be from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursdays, Jan. 18, 25, Feb. 1, 8, 15, 22 and March 1, 8, 15, 22, and 29.

Electrical Safety

Follow these electrical safety tips to ensure a safe festive season:

- Don't use lights with worn insulation, broken plugs and loose sockets.
- Be careful when hanging decorations close to fireplaces in use.
- Be sure fireplace openings are covered with a sturdy metal screen or heat tempered glass door.
- Do no overload circuits with too many electrical decorations or devices. Check product labels for the maximum number of light strings that you can safely connect together.
- Turn off tree lights before leaving home or going to bed.

Oats? Groats?

Oatmeal for breakfast brings back memories of my mother saying, "It will stick to your ribs."

Oatmeal and other whole grains do help to slow the rate of digestion. The soluble fiber in oatmeal keeps you full longer. Research suggests that oatmeal for breakfast can reduce morning hunger and curb your appetite so you won't be starving at lunch.

Oats are thought to be native to Asia. In Ancient times they were used for medicinal purposes. Greeks and Romans thought oats were just a pesky weed. Recognized as staple food in Scandinavia, Europe, and British Isles since 1000 B.C., oats were introduced to North America in the mid 1600's by early colonists.

During processing, the outer indigestible husk is removed. The oat bran and germ remain intact, making it a very nourishing whole grain. This common grain is an excellent source of dietary fiber, and provides significant amounts of B vitamins and folic acid.

Oats provide complex carbohydrates and both insoluble and soluble fiber. Recently oat products, especially oatmeal and oat bran, have attracted attention as more and more research has pointed to the cholesterol lowering benefits of the grain. This effect is greater in those individuals with higher cholesterol levels than those whose levels are within a "safe" range. This phenomenon is primarily due to the high level of beta-glucans found in the grain's soluble fiber. Researchers from the University of Minnesota found that blood cholesterol levels could be positively influenced by a daily intake of 3 grams of soluble fiber, or the equivalent of 1⅓ cups of cooked oatmeal.

A morning bowl of oatmeal or other whole grain food can help to maintain healthy blood pressure levels. Emerging research suggests that oatmeal may even help reduce blood pressure by preventing the narrowing of the arteries that occurs following a high fat meal and promoting better blood flow.

Hot oatmeal often comes to mind when oats are mentioned. One can make breakfast and other meals interesting by using oats in different forms. Precooked groats can be reheated with new toppings. Granola and muesli mixtures can be alternatives to cereals, or add some creative toppings to cooked oatmeal.

Baking with oat products adds flavor to many products. Add oat flour or oatmeal to breads for extra nutrition and flavor. Use oatmeal to thicken soups and stews and as a filler in meatloaf and casseroles.

Oats come in many forms:

Oat groats — Whole oat kernels, which can be cooked like rice or wheat berries. Presoak to shorten cooking time. They have a nutty, slightly sweet flavor. Try them (cooked) as a topping on apple crisp, serve as a side dish like rice, or in salads and stuffing.

Steel cut oats — These are groats that have been cut into chunks by steel blades. They are sometimes imported from Ireland in tins. They have a fairly long cooking time and a chewy texture. They are not rolled and look like coarse bits of grain.

Rolled oats — Probably the most familiar form to consumers. The kernels have been heated and pressed flat with steel rollers so they cook more quickly.

Old-fashioned oats are whole groats that have been steamed, pressed and rolled. They are thicker and take longer to cook. Quick cooking oats are sliced before steaming and pressing to reduce cooking time. Old-fashioned oats and quick cooking oats are usually interchangeable in recipes. Instant oats are precooked, dried and pressed very thin. These are the "just add hot water" or microwave type of hot cereal. Do not substitute these for old-fashioned or quick cooking oats in recipes or the cookies and baked goods may turn into gooey lumps.

Oat bran — The outer layer of the oat kernel. It has a lighter color and finer texture than wheat bran. It is sometimes added to recipes or packaged as a hot cereal.

Oat milk — A fairly new product that is a non-dairy alternative to milk made from oats. It comes in plain and vanilla flavors.

Oat flour — Made from groats that have been ground into a fine powder. It contains no gluten so it needs to be used with a flour that contains gluten to help baked goods to rise properly.

Baked oatmeal is a popular dish served at several bed and breakfast establishments in Lancaster County. Ginny Ranck serves this one at Verdant View Farm in Strasburg.

Baked Oatmeal

1 cup oil
1 cup sugar
1 cup brown sugar
4 eggs, beaten
¾ cups oatmeal
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
2 teaspoons vanilla (optional)
2 cups fresh fruit (like apple slices)
¾ cup raisins or walnuts (optional)

Heat oven to 350 F. Grease a 9" X 13" pan. Mix together oil, sugars and eggs. Add oatmeal, flour, baking powder, salt, vanilla and milk. Fold in fruit and nuts, if desired. Bake for 30 35 minutes. Serve warm with milk and cinnamon or brown sugar.

Preserving Farmland, One Book At A Time

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Paging through the book, "Farm Life," familiar images in stark black and white capture the essence of agriculture. Canning jars, corn fields draped in snow, hay wagons, families at work, fruit, and farm cats either educate or bring back fond memories of working the land for the reader.

The dedication, "For the farm families of Lancaster County, stewards of the soil," is a dedication that sets the tone for the call for land preservation that resounds through the entire book.

The pictures, taken by Lancaster native Gini Woy, formerly Gini Wagner, are woven among the interviews with seven farm families that make up the chapters of the book. Quotes that tout the importance of preserving farmland are laced among the pictures.

The book, "Lancaster County Farm Life — Farming Families And Their Commitment To The Land" was four years in the making.

A booklet in Vermont caught the eye of Karen Weiss, former director of land preservation at Lancaster Farmland Trust. At the time Woy was considering the idea of shooting photographs for fund-raising note cards, so the concept of a book for preservation fund-raising became a reality.

Sara Barton, also from Lancaster, wrote the descriptive copy that accompanies the pictures. Barton interviewed the families and teamed up with her father, a veterinarian and member of the Farmland Trust board, to draft the colorful quotes that capture farm life in words.

"Farm Life" is largely a volunteer effort, part of what makes the project so appealing, said Woy. The film, paper to print the pictures, writing, design, and prepress preparations were donated to the project. A fund-raising reception at the Pressroom Restaurant, Lancaster, paid for printing costs. The book was printed in Korea for greatest cost efficiency.

"It's hard to remember everyone who has given to it," said Woy. "One thing that still overwhelms me is all the people who gave freely to it."

Money from the sales goes to a separate account which tracks cost and profit.

"When the book came back from Korea ready to be sold, all the money was able to go back to the Trust," said Woy. "We were pretty proud of that accomplishment. It's a good selling tool, too."

Woy herself took vacation days and weekends to shoot the photographs. She estimates that she took 60-70 rolls of film to get the pictures for the book.

"I don't think I ever had so much fun on my vacation days as I did shooting photographs on those farms," said Woy. "I feel like I have a special connection to each family.

"It's a labor of love for all of us involved. We are all very proud of it."

Weiss chose the seven families highlighted in the book. "She chose families dedicated to preservation and able to tell their story in an interesting way," said Woy. "They are also scattered all over the county, because we wanted to represent each area of Lancaster County.

Photographing farm families posed an enjoyable challenge to Woy. Using only silhouettes helped Woy capture an Amish family. "The families were all happy and willing to participate because they believe in what they're doing.

"I don't think they had a full understanding of what it was going to be like to have me follow them around," said Woy with a laugh. She rode in a combine, took pictures during dinner, and followed around farm animals to capture the pictures which grace the pages of the book.

"I wanted to show every aspect of farming that I could. I just kept my eyes open and grabbed scenes as I saw them. I tried to immerse myself," she said of the many hours she spent at the farms. "They couldn't get rid of me. I easily spent eight hours there, and most of the time I went back more than once."

"I tried to represent different seasons, because I think that is part of the beauty of this area. Each season brings something unique," said Woy.

Although the seasons and farm life do provide excellent opportunity for color photos, Woy, whose first love with photography is black and white, chose the medium for the book.

"I felt the black and white worked the best with the subject matter. It has a more natural appearance and keeps with the theme of the book. It allows one to look at the composition."

Besides the insightful pictures and copy, the small details, according to Woy, help to make the book a standout. The green, textured end sheets were chosen for their similarity to a tobacco leaf. The end sheets with wheat superimposed on translucent paper also lend a quality touch to the book.

However, "There are still things that I would change about it," said Woy. "That's what makes you continue to grow."

Woy is already entertaining ideas for a book about farm women. "I need to see this one out a before I move onto other projects," she said. "There's a lot of marketing to do."

"Farm Life" has been available to the public for a month.

With completion of the book, marketing strategies have become the main focus. To contribute to the project, Turkey Hill stores are selling the book with all proceeds going to the Trust. Provident, Barnes and Noble, and Borders book stores also carry the book. Advertisements have also appeared in Lancaster Farming.

Volunteers have also handed out fliers advertising the book in downtown Lancaster to complement sales at Central Market's community stand. Additionally, Woy plans to hold more book signings. She will exhibit and sell prints from the book the evening of Feb. 22 at an art reception and book signing. The exhibit, open to the public, will take place at Landis Homes.

"There has been so many people willing to help us out to promote it," said Woy. "It makes me feel good that people not only say, 'Oh, that's such a nice book,' but also say that it's for a good cause.

"When we were conceptualizing it, we debated whether to sell it or hand it out. It's a tool for preservation and education on why preservation is important, so if can accomplish both of those missions, we can't ask for any more; it's doing its job.'

"I like it when people look at the images, read the quotes, and say, 'I didn't know that,'" she said. "When people start to understand how hard these farmers are working.

"Some people are buying the book as a gift for parents who grew up on a farm and have warm memories of the farm life — the nostalgia aspect of it," said Woy.

The book is also going international, as buyers of the book are sending it to clients, universities, or friends in such countries as Sweden, Germany, Japan, and England.

This spring, the Trust plans to market the book more towards tourist industry.

These photographs appear in the book, available at bookstores, Turkey Hill stores, and Lancaster Farmland Trust. All proceeds help the Trust preserve Lancaster farms.

Reared in Lancaster County, Woy learned to love the area through firsthand experience. "I've always loved this area. I think when we were kids (she has one older sister and a younger brother and sister), the seeds were planted. When I was about 10 to 14 years old, we would spend our summers on Amish farms. My mother made arrangements with the Amish gentlemen that she worked with so we could stay during the day.

"I loved it. That is a life experience I would never change. That's where I learned to bake bread and do canning. We worked in the fields with them and developed lifelong friendships. It really made me appreciate this area."

With aspirations of becoming a reporter, Woy earned a degree in English from Millersville University. To gain experience in the journalism field, she began writing for the school's newspaper.

Because of shorthanded staffing at the newspaper, she soon began to shoot photographs on assignment, an aspect of journalism which quickly became her favorite. "It was a natural fit for me," said Woy.

After college Woy headed to Philadelphia to attend Antonelli Institute in Philadelphia, a photography school, for two years.

After graduating from Antonelli Institute, Woy returned to Lancaster to work at a photo studio before moving into her present job as a commercial/industrial photographer for Godfrey Advertising, where she has

Gini Woy, formerly Gini Wagner, shot the striking black-and-white pictures for "Farm Life," a book sold by the Lancaster Farmland Trust. "It tells the stories of preservation and also stories of what it's like to live on a farm in Lancaster County," she said. "I think it makes people feel good to buy something that supports preservation."

Doctors Order Up Milk!

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Dairy farmers are giving doctors the tools to advise their young patients to "Get Up and Grow" by drinking milk. Targeted to health professionals, "Get Up and Grow" highlights general nutrition recommendations and showcases milk as the best source of calcium for kids ages 6-11.

This new program helps doctors educate parents about the importance of calcium in a child's growth and development. "Get Up and Grow" provides pediatrician offices with a growth chart featuring a milk-mustachioed Mario® from the popular Super Mario video game. The chart gives kids the chance to measure their height and provides easy tips to help them grow strong and have healthy bones.

"Get Up and Grow" also provides doctors' offices with a survey for parents to complete on their own or with their child's doctor. This will help parents pinpoint areas where their children may need improvement in their diets and will provide easy ways for parents to help their children attain better dietary habits.

"Many children don't realize the impact their food choices have on their bodies' growth and health," says Debra Summerall, spokesperson for the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. "They are missing out on a once in a lifetime opportunity to get the calcium they need to help grow strong and healthy bones."

The materials were distributed nationally by the National Dairy Council to pediatricians who are members of the American Academy of Pediatrics. Locally, PDPP is providing the tearpads and growth charts to additional health professionals by request.

A trip to pick up a prop for a photo shoot spurred Woy's involvement with the Trust. "I cut through the back way and by the time I got back, I was upset," said Gini, as she saw the farmland she used to ride horse through now developed.

"I came back and looked up Lancaster Farmland Trust and said, 'I'm interested in volunteering.'" Besides volunteer work, Woy has been on the Trust's board for three years.

Recently Woy was honored for her efforts as volunteer of the year at the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce banquet.

Although the time, effort, and thought that went into the project may have been draining, the challenge also proved to be stimulating.

"I did not have a complete concept of how much work was going to go into it," said Woy. However, "the book has challenged me and kept me satisfied the last couple of years," said Woy.

"It tells the stories of preservation and also stories of what it's like to live on a farm in Lancaster County," she said. "I think it makes people feel good to buy something that supports preservation."

The book, $39.95, is available through Lancaster Farmland Trust at (717) 293-0707.

This picture of Frank Ludwig, Mill Creek Valley, also appears in the book, "Farm Life - Farming Families and Their Commitment To the Land."

QUESTION — A reader requested an old recipe for clear bean soup made with fresh pork.

Mississippi Mud Pie

Cream together
1 cup butter
2 cups granulated sugar
⅓ cup cocoa
4 eggs, one at a time
Add:
1½ cups flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder
1 cup coconut
1 cup walnuts, chopped
Frosting:
½ cup butter
⅓ cup cocoa
5 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pound confectioners' sugar

Cream together butter, granulated sugar, cocoa, and eggs. Add flour, baking powder, coconut, and walnuts. Bake at 350 degrees in a greased 9x13-inch baking pan. Remove from oven and cover immediately with 1 pint marshmallow creme. Cool. Beat together frosting ingredients and frost cooled pie.

ANSWER — Helen Kofron, Claymont, Del., wanted a recipe for ground beef barbecue that tastes like that served at Shady Maple patio. Thanks to Rhonda Snyder, New Holland, for sending the recipe.

Barbecued Hamburger

2 pounds ground beef
1 onion
½ cup ketchup
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt

Fry onion and ground beef in 4 tablespoons hot fat until it loses its raw, red color.

Stir until smooth and then add the other ingredients. Simmer about 20 minutes and serve with hamburger rolls. Serves 8.

ANSWER — Agnes Martin requested the recipe for potato rolls, which had been printed earlier this year. Thanks to Tessie Kizis, Newsoms, Va., for sending the recipe, which was originally sent in by Lois Harnish in honor of Mother's Day. Tessie writes that this is a really a good recipe.

Potato Buns

1 cup warm mashed potatoes
1 cup warm potato water
3 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup wheat germ
1 cup sugar
½ cup shortening
1 package yeast
4-6 cups flour

Dissolve yeast in warm potato water. Mix all and let stand overnight. Roll out 1-inch thick and cut with round cookie cutter. Put on cookie sheet and let rise. Bake at 400 degrees.

Here's a different recipe sent in by M. Stoltzfus, Parkesburg, who offers this bit of advice to prevent losing recipes. M. keeps a three-ring notebook with magnetic pages. Whenever she tries a recipe her family likes, she places it in her "cookbook," so she can find it whenever she needs it.

Mom's Potato Buns

1 cup mashed potatoes
1 cup sugar
1 cup warm potato water
3 eggs, beaten
5-6 cups bread flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon yeast
½ cup butter, melted

In the evening, mix yeast into warm potato water and stir to dissolve. Stir all ingredients together in a bowl but do not knead. Place in large buttered bowl and butter top of dough. Cover and let set overnight. In morning, place spoonfuls of dough onto greased cookie sheets and let rise. Bake at 350 degrees just before noon meal and serve hot with butter and jelly.

ANSWER — E. King, Bird-in-Hand, wanted the recipe to make a dry mix for yellow cake, and directions for making it. Thanks to M. Stoltzfus, Parkesburg, for sending her recipe.

Yellow Cake Mix

9 cups flour
⅓ cup baking powder
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon cream of tarter
2 cups solid white shortening

Sift dry ingredients together. Cut in shortening until it resembles corn meal. Store in covered container at room temperature. Three cups of mix makes two 8-inch cake layers. To make the cake, try the following recipe.

Yellow Cake

3 cups mix
1¼ cups sugar
1 cup milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Stir sugar and cake mix together. Add remaining ingredients and beat 3 minutes. Grease and flour two 8-inch pans and spread batter evenly. Bake at 350-375 degrees for 25-30 minutes. Cool in pans for 10 minutes. Turn out on wire racks and finish cooling.

Variations: Add cocoa for chocolate cake, or cinnamon and nutmeg for spice cake.

ANSWER — A Dauphin reader wanted the recipe that Amish use to make cooked celery, which they serve at their weddings. Thanks to a Paradise reader for sending the recipe.

Cooked Celery

12 quart kettle filled to the top with cut-up celery
2 tablespoons salt
2½-ounces vingar
2 sticks butter

Add a little water to kettle to cook celery until soft. Mix together the following:

2 cups granulated sugar
2 heaping tablespoons flour

Add water to make a paste and add to softened celery. Slowly add 1½ cups canned milk or heavy cream. Do not boil after the cream is added.

Count Calories, Not Food Combinations

Despite what you might read in fad diet books, eating food in certain combinations does not help you lose weight.

The only thing that will help you lose weight is to expend more energy than you consume in calories.

That makes sense if you think about it: Nearly all foods are naturally combinations of protein, carbohydrates, and fat anyway. It's impossible to keep those types of foods completely away from each other.

If you want a healthier diet, increase the vegetables, fruits, whole grains and fiber you consume and reduce sugars and fats.

That said, you might be interested to know that food combinations do make a difference in some ways. Certain combinations of foods can help — or hinder — your body's ability to absorb certain nutrients. This doesn't have anything to do with calorie intake or losing or gaining weight. It does have something to do with getting more out of the food you eat in terms of nutritional value.

For example, Ohio State University researchers have recently discovered that the phytonutrient lycopene in tomato soup is likely to be absorbed much better by the body when the soup is made with whole milk. When the soup is made with skim milk or with water, lycopene absorption is cut in half. Lycopene is thought to help prevent some types of cancer.

Similarly, consuming certain vitamins can enhance the body's absorption of minerals. Vitamin D helps the body absorb calcium. This makes milk fortified with vitamin D a good food choice. Vitamin C is a good choice to take with iron, but don't overdo it. Vitamin C supplements along with iron supplements can lead to too much iron being absorbed, and that could damage the liver.

On the other hand, if for some reason you've consumed a lot of zinc, your body's ability to absorb copper is compromised. Also, consuming large amounts of calcium can interfere with the body's ability to absorb magnesium, iron and zinc.

The problem often results because minerals have similar atomic weights and charges (positive or negative), making them compete with each other for uptake in absorptive cells in the intestine.

Got Fear? Get Facts

NAPSI — Got fear? That's the message some special interest groups promote about our food.

Under the banners of "physicians' committees," "public interest" groups and "consumer rights" organizations, they scare us to raise money for themselves.

A recent campaign-in TV and newspaper ads, highway billboards, supermarket flyers and the Internet-abuses the popular "Got Milk?" ads. These groups ran "Got Beer?," 'Got Prostate Cancer?" and other misguided ads to scare consumers away from dairy products.

Other wild claims include milk causing diabetes, cancer, ear infections, infant allergies, colic and anemia. One group actually said calcium-rich milk increased, rather than decreased the risk of osteoporosis.

According to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, American Cancer Society, American Dietetic Association and many other government and independent experts, the scary claims are seriously misleading and plain false.

Some state "public interest" groups placed fullpage newspaper ads attacking milk produced by cows receiving hormones. Similar messages circulated in "Safe Food News" magazines at pricey "natural" food supermarkets.

This "Got hormone-free milk?" campaign falsely claims dairy consumers risk breast and prostate cancer, increased antibiotic resistance and other ills. The campaign offers coupons for "hormone-free" ice cream and ways to help schools ban the offending milk.

But extensive, world-wide testing of milk and meat from such cows shows the products are safe, according to the FDA. Separate reviews by the National Institutes of Health, the World Health Organization, and studies in prestigious medical journals such as Pediatrics and the Journal of the American Medical Association also conclude the products are safe.

What do these multi-million dollar campaigns have in common besides being misleading? The special interests raise money with the assistance of a slick, marketing and public relations firm in Washington, D.C.

Documents expose these campaigns as designed to "generate revenues" for the special interests by exploiting headline-grabbing scares. When the scares were exposed as false, one group blamed the media for "muddling" the message.

The PR firm conveniently also represents many for-profit "natural" and "organic" products businesses whose marketing campaigns benefit from the scares. Often, for-profit marketing efforts are included with the non-profit ads as free product coupons or acknowledged sponsorships. Not surprisingly, the for-profit businesses also fund the various special interest groups.

The lesson for consumers when presented with "Got fear?" campaigns, is to "Get facts."

Holiday Safety

No matter how hectic your schedule is during the holiday season, always keep safety in mind. A fall from a ladder, trip on the stairs or electrical accident can quickly take the fun out of this special season.

When using a ladder to hang decorations, don't stretch too far — you may lose your balance. Make sure the ladder is safe and sturdy before you begin. It's also wise to have someone steady it for you as you climb.

Don't carry too many things up or down the stairs at one time. Sometimes it's better to make two trips than to struggle on the stairs and lose your vision. Avoid leaving objects on the steps. Some of the worst accidents in the home are caused by tripping over items left on stairways.

New Perspectives On Caffeine And Headache

NAPSI — Caffeine has been enjoyed by millions of people around the world for centuries. In one form or another, the average American consumes about 200 to 300 mg of caffeine per day, and many say caffeine helps energize them and perform at their peak.

What many people may not know is that caffeine has been used to help treat headaches for many years. Caffeine has also been added to prescription and over-the-counter pain relievers to boost their efficacy.

But how much caffeine is too much? Can people who regularly consume caffeine in the form of coffee or cola still use a "caffeinated" pain reliever without overdoing it? To help answer questions like these, the National Headache Foundation, a nonprofit organization that provides information to headache sufferers and promotes headache research, asked a panel of medical experts to examine the published material on the relationship between caffeine and headache. This panel agreed with published studies that show caffeine, when combined with aspirin and acetaminophen, enhances the pain-relieving power of these over-the-counter headache medicines-by up to as much as 40 percent. In addition, the panel reviewed safety data and concluded that caffeine, when used properly, is not addictive and poses no health risk for most people.

According to Jerome Goldstein, MD, director of the San Francisco Headache Clinic and chair of the expert panel, caffeine offers another benefit. "Because medications that contain caffeine work faster, there is less likelihood that people will need to take more of the medicine, and the risks of unwanted side effects are reduced."

To help consumers understand these findings, the National Headache Foundation has developed a new information brochure, "New Perspectives on Caffeine and Headache," that offers new ways to help people understand the relationship between caffeine and headache and help them make a well-informed decision about treatment.

Consumers can also learn ways to measure their caffeine consumption and gain a better understanding of the role caffeine plays in treating headaches.

'We wanted to bring consumers the opinions of experts to help them make the right decisions about treating their headaches," says Suzanne Simons, executive director of the National Headache Foundation. "Our hope is that the findings of this panel and the information in the brochure will help eliminate any confusion headache sufferers may have regarding what triggers their headaches and how to treat them."

The "New Perspectives on Caffeine and Headache" brochure addresses the science behind caffeine's headache-fighting properties. By increasing the production of stomach acid, caffeine helps the body absorb headache medicines more quickly. Caffeine also constricts certain blood vessels, which reduces blood flow and eases pressure associated with certain headaches, such as painful migraines. The brochure offers a quiz that helps people determine how much caffeine they consume on a daily basis, a list of the most common sources of caffeine and a chart to gain a better idea of their weekly caffeine intake. Common questions about caffeine are also addressed, such as:

Can I become addicted to caffeine?

What happens when I stop consuming caffeine?

How can I avoid rebound headaches and caffeine withdrawal?

To order a copy of "New Perspectives on Caffeine and Headache," call the National Headache Foundation at 1-888-NHF-5552.

Gifts To Make

Looking for something to give a friend or family member this year? Why not make something? These ideas won't cost you a lot, and they'll mean so much to anyone who gets them.

Bird Feeders

What You Need
- Pine Cones
- Peanut Butter
- Birdseed
- Bright-Colored String

What You Do

Pour some birdseed into a cake pan. Tie a piece of string around one end of a pine cone. Coat the pine cone in peanut butter. Roll it in the birdseed. Anyone who enjoys feeding and watching birds will enjoy this gift.

Photo Puzzles

What You Need
- Scissors
- Glue
- Favorite Photos
- Heavy Paper (like construction paper)

What You Do

Make color or black-and-white copies of the photos you have chosen. Glue a copy to a piece of heavy paper. When it dries, cut the glued photo into pieces—make sure they are all different shapes and sizes. Put the pieces in an envelope or small box. Whoever receives these puzzles will enjoy putting them together.

Bath Salts

What You Need
- Jars & Containers
- Box of Epsom Salt
- Food Coloring
- Bath Oil Fragrance (optional)
- Decorations (for jars)

What You Do

For the containers, you can use anything from baby food to mayonnaise jars, just be sure to wash and dry them well. Decorate the jars with paints, beads, fabric or anything you choose.

In a big bowl, mix the salt and food coloring with your hands (you also can use a spoon). When you get the color you want, add the fragrance, which is available at craft stores. Then fill your decorated jars with the salt, add a bow and give someone special a gift to brighten a bath.

Pillows

What You Need:
- Felt Squares
- Scissors
- Pillow Stuffing
- Fabric Glue
- Decorations—beads, buttons, sequins, etc.

What You Do:

Select the colors of felt for your pillow. From one piece of felt, cut out the design—animal, Christmas tree, flower, etc.—you want for the front of the pillow. You may want to use cookie cutters or pictures from magazines as patterns. Glue the design on the piece of felt that will be the pillow front. Put glue around three edges of the back of the pillow front. Attach another piece of felt to the back of the first piece. Stuff the pillow through the opening, then run glue around the open edge and close it. Apply decorations to the design on the front of the pillow. These pillows will make fun gifts for anyone.

With Christmas just around the corner, whatever we didn't accomplish by the 23rd just might not get done. It is easy for me to get the cards mailed on time. And, I enjoy making 15 or 20 kinds of cookies, but decorating is a chore. It was easier when the children were living at home and could help to decorate the tree. We have plenty of ornaments as at one time, we put up two trees.

My mother always hung a small, faded red paper wreath on the kitchen door. And, my father cut a small, prickly cedar tree from our meadow for us to decorate with colored paper chains.

A main part of our Christmas celebration, when I was young, was the children's program at church. After the program, we went down the back stairs and there was a man offering each of us a small box of chocolates and a big orange. That was something very special to look forward to. Even the trip to church in our 1923 Overland car, at nighttime and often in heavy fog, was a memorable occasion.

We wore long, brown ribbed stockings held up by garters. These we hung at the wainscoting and hoped for another orange and some hard candy. In our family of nine, we exchanged names and one year my father had my name. He bought me a 10 cent handkerchief. It was not the gift, but rather the thought of him actually shopping for me that I remember.

This year we expect to have a quiet Christmas. But, the Saturday afterwards will be very busy as we have planned our annual open house and expect a lot of relatives to come.

GOURMET POTATOES

6 medium potatoes
3 cups shredded sharp cheese
¼ cup butter
1½ cups sour cream
⅓ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cook potatoes in skins. Cool. Peel and shred potatoes coarsely. In saucepan, over low heat, combine cheese with half the butter. Stir until cheese is almost melted — remove from heat and blend in sour cream, onions, salt, and pepper. Fold in potatoes and turn into 2-quart casserole. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 6-8.

Lucinda Bray
Berks Co. Dairy Princess

CHEDDAR POTATO STRIPS

3 large potatoes, cut into ½-inch strips
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 tablespoons minced fresh parsley

In a greased 13x9x2-inch baking dish, arrange potatoes in a single layer. Pour milk over potatoes. Dot with butter; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover and bake at 425 degrees for 30 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Sprinkle with cheese and parsley. Bake, uncovered, 5 minutes longer or until cheese is melted. Yield: 4 servings.

Sarah Krall
Lebanon Co. Dairy Princess

GREEN LIMA BEAN CASSEROLE

½ cup milk
10-ounce can condensed cheese soup
1 cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 cups cooked green lima beans
½ cup canned French fried onion rings

Blend milk with soup, add celery, parsley, and lima beans. Place mixture in a baking dish. Top with onion rings. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

CRANBERRY HOLIDAY SALAD

6-ounce package orange-flavored gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
16-ounce can jellied cranberry sauce
1 can crushed pineapple, drained
½ cup diced celery

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water, add orange rind and cranberry sauce. Chill until thickened, stir in pineapple and celery. Pour into 1½ quart mold. Chill until firm (about 3-4 hours). Unmold on crisp salad green. Makes 10-12 servings.

Betty Biehl

HAM LOAF

2 pounds ground beef
1 pound ground cured ham
1 cup moist bread crumbs
2 eggs
1 slice onion, cut fine
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk or tomato juice

Mix together all ingredients and shape into a loaf and place in roasting pan.

Betty Biehl

APPLE PUDDING

4 apples, cut into small cubes
1 cup sugar
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
2 eggs, beaten
4 tablespoons butter, melted

Sift together dry ingredients. Add apples, beaten eggs, and melted butter. Stir until blended and turn into greased 9-inch square pan. Bake about 45 minutes at 350 degrees. Cut into squares as you would brownies and serve hot with vanilla ice cream or whipped cream.

APPLE OF YOUR EYE CHEESECAKE

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup melted butter

Combine and press into bottom of lightly greased 10-inch springform pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. Cool.

Filling:

3 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
¾ cup sugar
3 eggs
¾ teaspoon vanilla

Topping:

2½ cups chopped, peeled apples
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

In a mixing bowl, beat cream cheese and sugar until smooth. Add eggs, beat on low just until combined. Stir in vanilla. Pour over crust. Toss apples with lemon juice, sugar, and cinnamon, spoon over filling. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour or until center is almost set. Cool on wire rack for 10 minutes. Carefully run knife around edge of pan to loosen. Drizzle desired amount of caramel ice cream topping on top. Cool one hour. Remove sides of pan. Yields 10 servings. Enjoy.

Leechburg

CREAMY MASHED POTATO BAKE

3 cups hot mashed potatoes
1 cup sour cream
¼ cup milk
¼ teaspoon garlic powder (optional)
1⅓cups French fried onions
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine mashed potatoes, sour cream, milk, and garlic powder in large bowl; mix well. Spoon half the mixture into 2-quart baking dish. Sprinkle with ⅔ cup French fried onions and ½ cup cheese. Top with remaining potato mixture. Bake 30 minutes until hot. Top with remaining onions and cheese. Bake 5 minutes until onions are golden.

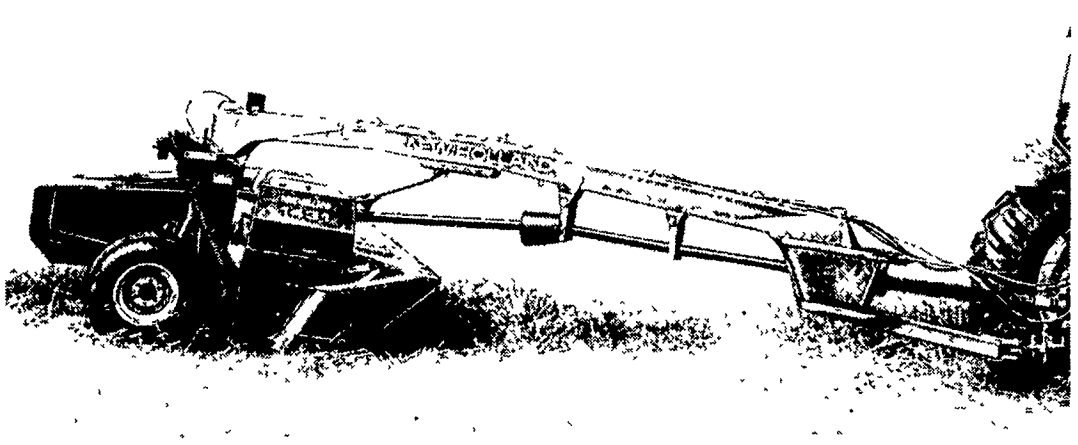
Cut faster... condition better



For greater maneuverability and higher efficiency, nothing beats the Model 1431 Discbine® disc mower-conditioner from New Holland. It features a 13' cutting width, and operates at high ground speeds in wet, heavy grass without plugging. Fire anthills and gopher mounds won't stop the new Model 1431 either.

Outstanding features include:

- A center pivot-tongue design
- Independent modular cutterbar with ten small-diameter cutting discs
- 102" wide conditioning rolls
- A full range of vertical and lateral flotation
- A torsion-bar roll-pressure system
- A cutterbar driven from both ends

Bedford County Farm Cooks Ready For The Holidays

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — "I never cooked at home when I was growing up," said Mid Koontz of the Friends Cove area of Bedford County. "But once I was married and living on a farm, I didn't have much choice. I had to learn and I have always liked to do it."

Mid, married 55 years, said that she really can't remember when she didn't cook two Christmas dinners. I do one for my side of the family and one for the Koontz side," she notes.

She prepares one dinner for her immediate family, which includes three children, and seven grandchildren, five of whom also have spouses.

The Sunday before Christmas, she sets the Koontz family spread for her husband's brothers and sisters.

Everyone pitches in to help with individual favorite recipes. However, Mid always prepares the turkey, stuffing and gravy. She also has several standby dishes which the family members just naturally expect.

Date Pudding

Make a syrup of the following:
1½ cups brown sugar
4 tablespoons butter
1 cup water
Bring to a boil. Pour into a casserole.

For batter:
2 tablespoons butter
1 egg
4 tablespoons brown sugar
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
Pinch salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chopped dates
1 cup nuts

Mix together batter ingredients. Drop by spoonful into the syrup. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean. When ready to serve, cover with whipped cream topping. Serve cold.

Popcorn Cake

1 gallon (plus) popped popcorn
10 large marshmallows (cut)
1 large handful (plus) of nuts, peanuts, coconut and gumdrops

Mix together in a big bowl.
For the Syrup:
1 cup coffee cream
2 cups granulated sugar
2 cups King Syrup

Boil until a softball forms. Cool. Pour over popcorn. Put in bread pans lined with plastic wrap.

Wrap in foil to keep from drying out.

THELMA WAREHAM

Sharing in the workload on a large dairy and hog farm for nearly 50 years, Thelma Wareham is now a widow. But, she has not let her culinary skills go by the wayside. She is often found cooking for one event or another at the Everett Church of the Brethren.

"I get them from everywhere," she said with a laugh. "Friends get them for me, I get them at yard sales, or as souvenirs. I started the collection for my husband and it just took off."

One of her favorite recipes is quick, easy, and a great treat for any holiday celebration. "Just change the colors for whatever the occasion and you are ready to go," she said.

Peanut Butter Crackers

Spread Ritz crackers with a layer of peanut butter. Melt coating wafers in the microwave and dip the crackers. Place on waxed paper until set. Freezes well.

At Easter, use Ritz crackers because they are shaped like eggs. For Christmas choose coating wafers in the colors of green and red. Valentine's Day, choose red and white; on Easter, pastels, and, on Halloween try orange and chocolate.

Pumpkin Pecan Pie

1 egg, lightly beaten
1 cup pumpkin
⅓ cup granulated sugar

2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons butter, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup pecans

Mix well and spoon over pumpkin layer. Bake at 350 for 50 minutes or until filling is set.

Peg Wolfhope

PEG WOLFHOPE

Peg Wolfhope is still feeding beef cattle. Even after a dispersal sale this summer, Peg stops each evening on her way home from work at the AAI Insurance office in Bedford to feed their remaining beef cattle.

She has been living on a farm since her marriage nearly 40 years ago. Her husband Ed, daughter Tawnya, and son-in-law Troy enjoy her cooking. So do her co-workers when she occasionally takes a treat to the office.

Apple Cake

3 cups chopped apples
2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
3 cups flour
¼ teaspoon sage
1 teaspoom cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1cup butter, melted
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup nuts
1 cup raisins

MMix together butter, sugar, and apples. Add flour, spices, and stir. Blend in nuts and raisins. Bake at 350 for 45 to 50 minutes in a greased 13x9x1-inch pan.

THELMA LAFFERTY

Cranberry Salad

Grind cranberries and soak overnight in 1 cup sugar. Next morning, dissolve 2 boxes lemon-flavored Jell-O in 2 cups hot water (no cold water).

West Snyder FFA Conducts Food For America Program

On Nov. 14, the West Snyder FFA Chapter presented a "Food For America" program at Beaver Adams and West Beaver elementary schools.

Amanda Shaffer, SUN Area Dairy Maid, and Melissa McWilliams spend their time explaining to the fourth grade students about how milk gets from the cow to the grocery store. Various dairy products were also discussed with the students.

Following the classroom presentation, all fourth grade made "Ice Cream In A Bag" with the FFA members.

Doug Hollenbach, Hannah Etzler, and Derek Fetterolf gave a presentation on sheep, beef, and hogs, respectively. Each of these presentations taught the elementary students the value of specific livestock as food. Heather Hollenbach gave a presentation on chickens and eggs. She showed the students various types of eggs which would be unacceptable in the egg industry. Brandon Herman explained the importance of various crops fed to livestock and how they affect the production of food for people.

Following the presentations, the elementary students played "FOODO," a bingo-style game which emphasizes the importance of food. and toured the dairy farm of Glenn and Barb Carper in McClure.

West Snyder FFA member Amanda Shaffer and FFA member Melissa McWilliams are the "Magic Cow" helped the fourth grade students at Beaver Adams Elementary School make "Ice Cream In A Bag." The dairy promotion was held in conjunction with the FFA "Food for America" program.

LMH FFA

Two Lancaster Mennonite High School FFA teams received awards at the 73rd National FFA Convention in Louisville, Ky., in October.

The agricultural mechanics team received a gold emblem award at the National FFA Agricultural Mechanics Career Development Event, placing the team fourth in the nation and giving it the highest ranking for any Pennsylvania team.

In order to qualify for national competition, the LMH teams placed first at the FFA Convention mid-June at Pennsylvania State University's main campus.

LMH's Hans Herr Chapter agricultural mechanics team members are sophomore Alex Ranck, 15, son of James and Joan Ranck, Christiana; senior Kristopher Good, 17, son of Daniel and Sharon Good, Mountville; junior Darrel Martin, 17, son of Galen and Nancy Martin, Mount Joy; senior Kevin Nolt, 17, son of James and Ruth Ann Nolt, Mount Joy; and senior Timothy Keener, 18, son of Ronald and Fern Keener, Elizabethtown. Individually, Ranck placed third in the country and received a $900 scholarship.

The Livestock team members are senior Jeremy Ranck, 18, son of James and Joan Ranck, Christiana; junior Nathan Hoover, 16, son of Lloyd and Elaine Hoover, Leola; junior Jason Rohrer, 17, son of Kevin and Audrey Rohrer, Manheim; and senior Paul Hostetter, 18, son of James and Mary Louise Hostetter, Holtwood.

Teacher Christopher Ochs serves as FFA adviser for the ag mechanics team, and Lem Metzler is adviser for the livestock team. Two additional members of the Hans Herr FFA chapter were also invited to represent the school at the national convention. They are senior Derek Redmond, 18, son of Henry and Jean Redmond, Mohnton; and senior Yohannes Yosef, 17, son of Yohannes Ghebru Yosef and Alemayu-Gebru Haimanot, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

The National FFA Agricultural Mechanics Career Development Event is designed to test knowledge and skills in agricultural mechanics. Areas of emphasis include energy systems, environmental/natural resource systems, machinery and equipment systems, structural systems, and industry and marketing systems. The National FFA Livestock Evaluation Career Development Event tests the students' ability to select and evaluate livestock.

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Or, you may e-mail questions and answers to lgood.eph@lnpnews.com

Please clarify what question you are answering when responding.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

ANSWER — Eleanor Heavner, Flintstone, Md., wanted to know how to rid an old farmhouse of flies. They had covered the house with siding and installed new windows, but continue having a problem with flies. Thanks to David Bordner, Enola, who writes that these flies are called cluster flies and adult flies appear in large numbers generally on the sunny side of homes. As days shorten and become cooler, cluster flies look for houses to winter and typically seek the same home year after year. To control these flies you must treat them before they get into attic and wall voids. This means power spraying and insecticide preferably a wettable powder or microencapsulated chemical. It is critical that the siding, overhangs, doors and window frames are treated. Timing is important. In Pennsylvania, treating should be done between Aug. 30 and early Sept. Check with the extension office in your county for recommendation of a pest control company that provides exterior barrier treatments and for the best date to apply the insecticide in your area.

ANSWER — John Beiler, Waveland, Ind., wanted to purchase a good used cream separator. Thanks to Ken Henry, Elizabethtown, for writing that he has one in good working shape with all the baffles and baffle cleaner for $125.

ANSWER — Richard A Matz, Galetown, wanted to know the recipe for whitewash. Thanks to Elmer Smith, Linden, for sending extensive directions from the National Lime Association. Here is a recap. While lime along with water for whitewashing can be used in some instances, the durability of such a mixture will be improved by adding other materials to the mix. First, make approximately 8 gallons stiff lime paste by slaking 25 pound of quicklime with 10 gallons water or by soaking 50 pounds of hydrated lime in 6 gallons water. Here are a few formulas:

- 15 pounds salt, 8 gallons lime paste. Dissolve the salt in 5 gallons water and add solution to lime paste. Mix thoroughly and thin to desired consistency with fresh water.
- 5 pounds calcium chloride, 8 gallons lime paste: The substitution of calcium chloride for the salt in the previous formula produces a mixture that does not chalk and is quite durable. The same mixing directions apply.
- 25 pounds white portland cement, 25 pounds hydrated lime. Both the cement and lime should be added together in dry form to about 8 gallons water. After mixing thoroughly a thick slurry will result. Additional water should be added until after further agitation the mixture resembles the consistency of heavy cream. Do not mix more than can be used within a few hours.

Your Used Car: Better To Give Than Sell?

With increasing frequency, radio announcements, classified ads, and television promotions are mentioning used car donations as a giving alternative that can result in a handsome, income tax write-off while also providing a simple way for both individuals and businesses to dispose of unwanted vehicles.

A sample, unscientific e-mail poll at the office found that, of the 32 people responding, only one had donated a personal vehicle to a local charity within the last five years.

"Are you nuts? Do people really do that? was one of the response I received. "I can't afford to donate a car, even if it is used!"

But if a tax credit is what is motivating your good will, do the math before signing over your title else you reap no financial benefit.

My friend gave away a lower value car once thinking he would be able to get a tax credit or refund. But since he did not have enough deductions overall to warrant itemization on his taxes, he did not get the direct tax benefit he expected. It sounded like a good idea, but since he did not do his homework, it didn't work the way he expected.

When you donate your car, you are entitled to a charitable deduction equal to the fair market value of the car. This is usually established according to the National Automotive Dealers Association "blue book" listing for used cars. In some cases, the value of the vehicle will exceed the amount you could get if sold. But, if your car is in terrible condition and is worth less that its "blue book" value, you will have to use its true market value, not the "blue book" value.

There are several things you must do when donating a car to prove your right to a deduction when preparing your tax return. Be sure to take the necessary steps to substantiate your deduction. First, you must obtain written acknowledgment from the charitable organization that you made the donation, describing the car, and that the charity provided no services to you in exchange. Second, if the value of the vehicle is over $500, you must attach Form 8283 to your tax return showing when and how you acquired the car and its original cost. If the value exceeds $5,000, special rules requiring an appraisal apply.

- Ask for a copy of the organization's Internal Revenue Service (IRS) determination letter. It will verify that the soliciting group is tax exempt as a charity under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Tax Code. Don't assume that a charitable-sounding organization requesting donations is eligible to receive tax deductible gifts.
- Ask the organization for copies of its latest annual report and IRS Form 990. Those documents specify how they spent their funds in the past fiscal year. Check to make sure that the charity is registered to solicit with your state government's charity registration office. Also, contact your Better Business Bureau for information it may have on file.
- Find out what happens to the donated cars. Some charities may state that donated cars will be used to help carry out the group's program service activities (such as providing transportation for needy families). However, if the charity is involved in major promotions for such contributions, chances are that the volume donated will result in most cars not being used but, instead, sold to raise funds for the organization.
- Cars can be sold directly by the charity or through an outside seller, such as an auctioneer or used car dealer. If an outside seller is involved, the charity might receive a flat fee (for example, $100 per vehicle), a percentage of the actual sales price, or a combination of both. In some cases, less than 20 percent of the actual sale may go to the charity. Ask the charity for a receipt that verifies a car donation was made.

For cars that need to be towed-in, the charity may need to mail receipts and titles to the donor. This is all the more reason to investigate the charity before making the donation. It is up to the donor, not the charity, to place an accurate value on the car donation.

If the donated value, as claimed, exceeds $500, the individual or business contributor will need to complete IRS Form 8283 as an attachment to his tax return. If the claimed value is over $5,000, the donor will need to obtain a qualified written appraisal of the car.

"Were you born in a barn? Close that door."

Ah, the sounds of cool weather and the impending winter season. And, as a child, I heard this particular sound from my mom frequently.

More than 18 winters of hearing Mom's energy conservation battle cry has left an indelible impression on her children — and her grandchildren. Hips cocked to the right, hands balled in a tight fist on said hips, my sassy 5-year-old niece barked a very similar order to her 7-year-old brother last weekend. "Were you born in a barn?" By now, we all know what that means.

With home heating costs expected to skyrocket this winter and energy usage on the increase, such sage advice can go a long way toward stretching your energy dollar. According to the Department of Energy, consumers should expect to pay some 26 to 43 percent more this winter to heat their homes.

Many natural gas and home heating oil companies allow customers to lock in a lower rate before cold weather hits. But, fuel prices for customers where rates are not frozen have increased substantially. The cause is basic Economics 101 — demand is greater than supply.

What's the average consumer to do to hold down costs to a more reasonable level while retaining comfort? The answer can be summed up in two words — energy efficiency. It produces three benefits at once — cuts energy costs and air pollution while increasing home comfort.

The Department of Energy offers consumers tips to cut energy bills this winter:

- Heating expenses account for the biggest chunk of winter energy bills. Make sure your furnace receives a professional "tune-up" each year.
- Clean or replace air filters once a month to help your unit run more efficiently.
- Cut related annual energy expenditures up to 30 percent. As heating and cooling equipment, appliances, computers and office equipment, windows, lighting fixtures, etc. break down or no longer meet your needs, replace them with products bearing the Department of Energy's Energy Star label (symbol for energy efficiency) (www.energystar.gov).
- Your home is probably leaking energy dollars. Make sure attic and/or ceilings are well insulated. Seal joints in attic air ducts and make sure they are well insulated too. The North America Insulation Manufacturer's Association Web site (www.naima.org) has insulation details.
- Plug other energy "leak." Seal leaks between moving parts (between door and its frame) with weather-stripping. Fill leaks between nonmoving parts (between window frame and wall with caulking) and look for windows, glass doors, and skylight bearing the Energy Star label, and check out the www.efficientwindows.org Web site.
- Plug surprising "leaks" from standby power. Did you know that your idle TVs, VCRs, cable boxes, CD players, cassette decks, cordless phones, burglar alarms, and microwaves continue to consume energy when switched off to keep display clocks lit and memory chips and remote controls working? That costs consumers $3 billion annually in energy costs, according to the Department of Energy.
- Activate "sleep" features on computers and office equipment that power down when the equipment is on but not in use for a while. Turn off equipment during long periods of nonuse to cut costs and improve longevity.
- Let the sun help heat our home by keeping blinds of sun-exposed windows open in the daytime and closed at night.
- Upgrade your oil heat system. New oil heat systems are generally more efficient than older units and typically reduce heating oil consumption by 15 to 25 percent.
- To see what energy upgrades would have the greatest payoff, log onto the interactive Home Energy Checkup on the Alliance to Save Energy's Web site www.ase.org/checkup/home.

Decorating With Antique Ornaments Makes Christmas Special

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

REEDSVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — Dottie and Joe Gearhart's eight-foot Christmas tree stands in a place of honor in their home — squarely in the center of their living room floor, visible from all sides. That's how important Christmas and their antique Christmas ornaments and decorations are to the Gearharts.

"We pack 100 ornaments in each computer paper box, and we have seven or eight boxes. There are about 700 ornaments on this tree," said Dottie. Few of the ornaments date later than 1910.

"We started collecting 50 years ago. I used to buy "the pile" at auctions, the items thrown together that wouldn't sell. When I started collecting ornaments and decorations, no one wanted them," Dottie says.

The Gearhart ornament and decoration collection encompasses glass, paper, and wax angels, churches and houses, bells, animals, musical instruments, pipes, Christmas trees, pine cones, chalk-faced Santas, colorful Kugels, feather trees, candy containers, Dresden ornaments, German stars, "putz" or the things under the tree such as animals and the nativity, and much, much more.

"The flying wax angels are a whole other story. They're fragile and they melt. They're from the 1890 Victorian era and were made over a period of about 20 years. Collectible to me is before World War II. I try to collect ornaments and decorations from countries in Central Europe such as Germany, Czechoslovakia, and Austria. Not Japan. The quality's not there," Dottie explains. "These ornaments are so hard to buy now because they're so expensive."

Folklore, Legends, And Facts

Legend claims that a home in Germany in 1640 housed the first decorated tree. "The German and Protestant churches — not the Puritans — accepted Christmas trees. The trees were decorated with fruits, grains, and nuts to celebrate the harvest, as a hymn to Jesus. Santa Claus is pure myth, but not the Christmas tree."

Lights first adorned a tree in 1700. The first cottage industry of glass ornament making developed in Germany in 1840. The men would blow the ornaments; the women would decorate; the children would sell them in the villages. Paper, tinsel, and cellophane were used before glass.

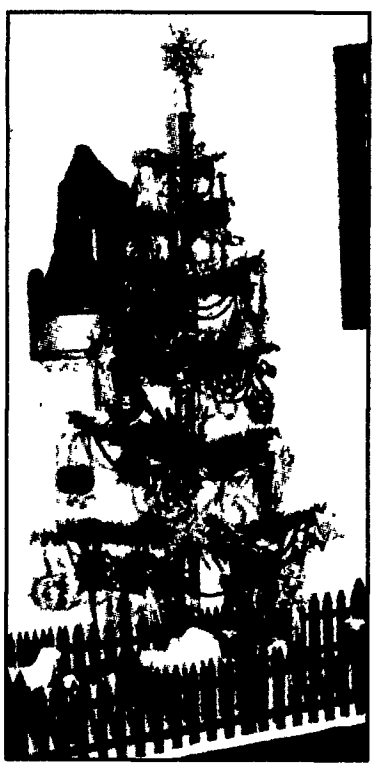
The large German Kugel balls became popular from 1840 to 1860. In the late 1800s, factories in New Jersey and New York began producing Kugel balls, and it became difficult if not impossible to tell the difference. Very few were made after 1880.

Dottie Gearhart proudly holds the double-bulbed Kugel ornament her husband, Joe, gave her. These beautiful bulbs have embossed brass ends and were painted in the inside.

"About that time, Woolworth went to Germany and brought Kugels back in bulk," Dottie explains. "There are two types — glass ones blown into molds and figures, such as grapes, pears, and eggs, and the free-blown ones. They're balls or a twisted shape. Of course, there have been reproductions made of all of these. You can tell the difference by the paint, weight, and brass ornaments. Also, the spear on top of an original is very small."

Dottie's bowl of colorful Kugel balls contains a huge cobalt-colored one as well as many of other colors and one shaped like a bunch of grapes.

Folklore has it that Hessian soldiers introduced Christmas trees to America during the Revolutionary War. Supposedly, Washington attacked while the British and Hessians soldiers were celebrating Christmas.



Dottie realizes that some people might call a "scrap" tree ugly, but the trim on these Victorian-era ornaments is made from pure silver. Putting flags on a Christmas tree was common practice in Europe and in America during the Revolutionary War.

Whether fact, fiction, or folklore, the Gearharts thoroughly enjoy collecting the ornaments that have adorned so many homes during Christmas for so many generations.

Dottie also keeps a booth of antiques for sale at the Dairyland Antique complex. She teaches how to make German stars, many of which are seen throughout the Gearhart home and at the Dairyland Antique complex.

"To me, decorating for Christmas is my Christmas," Dottie said.

Caring For Rare Books

They say you shouldn't judge a book by its cover. But when it comes to book collecting, a book is judged by its cover — and its overall condition. That's why it's so important for collectors to prevent damage before it starts. Jerry Patterson, book and manuscript consultant to William Doyle Galleries in New York City puts it this way: "You have to work at preserving your book collection. You can't just buy valuable books and then ignore them. The process of the book decay is very slow, but they still have to be treated with care."

Here are a few of the things you can do to make sure any rare books you may own stays viable and valuable for years to come.

Cool Books Last Longer

"The biggest enemy of collectable books is heat," says Patterson. "It's the single biggest problem for private collectors." Overheating dries out a book. This causes a book to shrink. The leather and cloth bindings crack and the book literally falls apart. (Leather binding — half-leather, full leather, calfskin or Moroccocan — can often make quite a difference in the value of that library of otherwise unspectacular books you inherited from your grandparents.) Overheated books are a bigger problem in this country than in Europe because Americans tend to keep their living spaces at much higher temperatures. Even modern European homes are kept as cool as 50-60 degrees, Patterson notes. "Castles of old were cold," Patterson points out. "That's the perfect environment for books of the Middle Ages — and for books today." "I can't tell you how many times I've seen people on the Antiques Roadshow bring in books that have obviously been left next to the radiator," Patterson says. "They're dried out and cracked and no collector wants that."

Leave Them In The Dark

A sunlit room may be convenient for reading, but direct light can damage valuable books. Sunlight fades the dyes that often color leather bindings and can fade the edges of a book's page as well. "Sun particularly fades a dust jacket," notes Patterson. Many book owners are not aware of the importance of preserving a book's jacket, a feature added to books in the late 19th century. A first edition of F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Great Gatsby is worth $10,000 with its dust jacket, but only $1,500 without it, notes Patterson. "Collectors are willing to spend lots of money to get a book as close to the condition it was in when it was published," he adds.

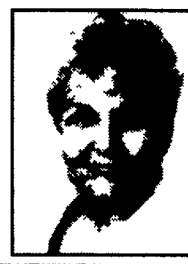
THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

Anne Gilbert



19th Century Fine Dining Symbolized By Tiffany Flatware

Status symbols change right along with fashion. For instance, Victorian silver flatware only within the last few years has been sought by collectors. The elaborate patterns are newly appreciated for their craftsmanship.

It is doubtful that the vogue for a utensil for each category of food will make a comeback. However, these days the many types are being individually collected in the various patterns.

Upper class dining in the Victorian era was a complex ritual. The result was a multiplicity of implements designated for eating and serving specific foods. For instance, there were petits fours serves, caviar forks, sawback orange knives, to mention a few. To the rescue came Charles Lewis Tiffany, silversmith and jeweler. Between 1869 and 1905, the heyday of Tiffany & Co.'s flatware production, the firm introduced 23 full-line patterns with as many as 40 different pieces for individual use and 60 serving pieces in each.

Retired cardiologist, Tiffany silver flatware collector Dr. William P. Hood Jr., has documented many previously unknown pieces and patterns in his definitive new book "Tiffany Silver Flatware 1845-1905 When Dining Was an Art."

Tiffany collectors had an opportunity to view an exhibition and sale of many historically-significant Tiffany at a weeklong special event at Rinceaux gallery in Palm Beach, Florida. Dr. Hood lectured and autographed copies of his book on Dec. 20.

As Dr. Hood points out, by the late 19th century, vast fortunes were accumulated by industrial magnates and the middle class-striving to keep up with the Joneses.

"The formal dinner party was the perfect opportunity for sophisticated hosts and hostesses to showcase their status and refinement with an abundance of elegant food and opulent table appointments," he said.

Clues: For many of today's collectors of Tiffany place settings, the problem has been in identifying patterns and pieces, making completion of a set difficult. 19th and 20th century Tiffany catalogs (known as Blue Books), have been scarce. They never illustrated the patterns and didn't show which pieces were offered in each pattern.

"The few pieces I have seen have been reorganized by the

Question And Answer

I found a small ceramic vase in a flea market that has swirled tan and white lines that look like sand. It's four-inches high. It is marked "Niloak." I paid $3 for it.

D.T. Quincy, Mass.

Your Niloak pottery was probably made around 1912, and is also known as Missionware, and was part of the Arts and Crafts movement of that era. It has a shop value of $90 to $100.

He also points out that exotic pieces are rare and expensive, "but, the prices are usually justified by the artistry and craftsmanship as well as the rarity."

He also advises collectors to be on the lookout for pieces not covered or illustrated in his book.

It is still possible to find pieces of old Tiffany flatware in the average antiques shop or show booth, but the "really good stuff comes up at auction at Sotheby's or Christie's in New York only about twice a year."

If you see a piece marked Tiffany & Co., along with another silver makers name or hallmark, such as Gorham, this shows Tiffany to be the retailer, not the maker.

"Don't limit your use to the original intent," he advises. "A terrapin fork serves just as well as a pastry fork and will make for interesting table conversation. A waffle knife is perfect for lasagna."

Because of the many techniques used in the different patterns a grouping of dessert knives in Japanese (Japonesque) style could be mounted and framed. This particular style had varied applied figural designs. Among them a beetle, fish in foliage, turtle.

Imagine serving a bowl of potato chips with a Tiffany Saratoga chip server! The servers originated in 1875. They weren't listed in his Blue Book until early 20th century. In the 1913 book, they were listed as potato chip servers.

Dr. Hood wrote the book with Roslyn Berlin (Tiffany dealer for 25 years) and Edward Wawrynek (former Tiffany vice president).

Question And Answer

I own a 1920s Magic-Chef stove and wonder what an asking price would be. How would I go about selling it? It is in working condition.

B.V.-Orange Park, Fla.

My best advice is to run an ad in an antiques publication or local paper. Prices paid vary greatly. Try asking $900 or best offer. Remember if you sell to a dealer they have to make a profit.

Rare Books

Book Storage

Cool basements are often the perfect place to store rare books because they are dark. However, basements can be damp, which can cause foxing, a chemical reaction that can stain paper, or lead to mold or attract insects.

"We think of libraries as dark rooms with heavy drapes and a little light over a chair," notes Patterson. "That's a good environment for rare books." Books also need to be dusted, as dust particles can brown the edges of a page. "They should be dusted two or three times a year," says Patterson. His tip to make the job easier? Use a hand-held vacuum cleaner.

After The Fact — Fixing Damaged Books

It's much harder to fix a book than to protect it. Reattaching the binding — called rebacking is one of the least-expensive repairs, and that still costs between $100-$200. "Many people think that it's cheap to get a book fixed, but it's not," says Patterson, noting that it can cost hundreds if not thousands of dollars to bring a book that has foxing (a chemical stain caused by moisture that often looks like a fox's paw) or a ruined binding back into good shape. "If you have a book printed in the 1500s, it would be worth restoring," explains Patterson, noting that high repair costs have to do with today's high cost of labor. "But even a first edition Dickens may not be worth the repair price."

Question And Answer

I have a 2 ½" high, black, matte cup with a shield-type emblem and the word "Bermuda" under the shield. The shield has a crown over it and a blue fish in the center. It is marked on the bottom, "Wedgewood Etruria England" and stamped "Wedgewood England" "S." "Hand painted." Any information appreciated.

H.M.F.-Quincy, Mass.

Your souvenir cup was made in the early 20th century of basalt stoneware, a technique perfected by Wedgewood. The combination of manganese and iron make it black. Similar cups sell for $100-$125 in shops.

Students Intern For Water Resources Agency

NEWARK, Del. — Water is a hot topic in Delaware water sources; water quality in the state's bays, rivers, ponds, and groundwater; pollution, contamination, and runoff; and droughts and floods all are frequently in the news.

The Delaware Water Resources Center (DWRC) at the University of Delaware is at the hub of the state's water issues. The center focuses on providing solutions to Delaware's water problems; serving as a resource of information on water issues; and promoting the training and education of future water scientists, engineers, and others involved in water management and policy through undergraduate internships and graduate fellowships.

This year, nine undergraduates have been named DWRC interns. They will work on water resource-related issues of critical important to Delaware and the region. They are:

• Emily Gonce of Baltimore, a senior majoring in leadership and consumer economics, who is working with adviser, James Morrison, professor of consumer studies, on a survey to learn what factors influence people to purchase bottled water.

• Jennifer Campagnini of Dover, a senior majoring in natural resources management, who is working with adviser Gerald Kauffman, manager, UD Water Resources Agency, on evaluating an experimental watershed from Clayton Hall to the University Farm, encompassing several small tributaries to the White Clay Creek.

• Maeve Desmond of Newark, a senior majoring in plant science with a minor in soil science, who is working with adviser Bruce Vasilas, professor of plant and soil sciences, and others in collecting, organizing and analyzing data from specific wetlands in Delaware and Maryland, to develop a wetlands model.

• Anna Palermo of Newark, a senior majoring in environmental soil science, who is working with Vasilas to evaluate the potential of ectomycorrhize (a symbiosis between fungi and plant roots) as a hydrology indicator in wetlands.

• Melissa Weitz of Mantua, N.J., a senior majoring in animal science with a double minor in chemistry and geography, who is working with adviser Mark Radosevich, associate professor of plant and soil sciences, on a project to better understand how s-triazines, widely used pesticides globally, affect the molecular ecology of microbial communities, which degrade the pesticides in the field.

• Jason Hetrick of Jarretsville, Md., a junior majoring in environmental engineering, with adviser Anastasia Chirnside, associate scientist in bioresources engineering, who is studying the feasibility of the use of fungal bioreactors to treat industrial wastewater with high concentrations of nitrogen and organic compounds.

• Robert Ehemann of Newark, a senior majoring in natural resources management, with adviser, Joshua Duke, assistant professor food and resource economics, who is studying whether the cost of water is an efficient and fair method for allocating water in times of scarcity and whether conservation measures, including increased cost, will eliminate the need to expand water supplies in New Castle County.

• Leigh Johnson of Seaford, a junior majoring in environmental engineering with minors in chemistry and history, with adviser William Ritter, professor of bioresources engineering; who is studying the feasibility of composting poultry litter and food waste for use as a soil amendment or potting medium.

• Gregory Buckmaster of Wilmington, a sophomore majoring in biochemistry, with adviser Jeff Fuhrmann, professor of plant and soil sciences, who is studying the effect of alum as a poultry litter amendment on pathogens and microorganisms.

Each adviser is provided with a $5,000 mini grant to support the internship.

Rao Wins Food Rheology Award

GENEVA, N.Y. — The American Association of Cereal Chemists awarded the G.W. Scott Blair Memorial Award for Excellence in Food Rheology to M. Anandha "Andy" Rao, professor of food engineering in Cornell University's Department of Food Science and Technology (FS&T) at its annual meeting Nov. 5-9 in Kansas City, Mo.

The award was in recognition of Rao's research on the rheological properties of fruit juices and purees, pectin gels, and starch dispersions. Rao received an engraved plaque and a check for $500. Malcolm C. Bourne, FS&T/Geneva, received the same award in 1993 for his work on food texture.

"I am very pleased, but not surprised, that Andy was selected to receive this award," said Dr. Richard Durst, chairman of the FS&T program at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station where Rao pursues his research. "Not only is Andy an internationally recognized expert in food rheology, but he is an outstanding educator and one of the most genuinely amiable and cooperative members of this department."

Rao received his Ph.D. from The Ohio State University in 1969, came to Geneva in 1973, and has been one of the mainstays of the food science program ever since. Rao, a food engineer, specializes in rheological properties of foods, thermal processing of foods, and extraction, filtration, and concentration of fruit juices. Rheology is the science of deformation and flow of matter.

"Rheological properties play important roles in the design of food processing and handling operations, quality control, and sensory assessment of foods," said Rao. "Over the years, the Fruit and Vegetable Processing Pilot Plant at Geneva has provided me unique opportunities for preparing samples of apple sauce, apple juice, and tomato concentrates, specifically for studying their rheological properties."

Like many other scientists, Rao's biggest challenge has been finding funding. He notes that funding for research in food engineering has been limited to the USDA NRI program. Allocation to the program has remained stagnant for a long time and was cut for 2001.

Rao looks forward to the future of both his program and rheology. "I see exciting opportunities due to developments in instrumentation that will help us study food structure and understand the relationship between the structure and rheological behavior of foods, and computer hardware and software that will help us examine food processing operations by means of computer simulation," he said.

Rao feels fortunate to have such a viable research program and is especially proud of all his graduate students who are now employed in industry and academia. Students who have completed their study with Rao and are employed throughout the world in industry and academia are Jirarat Tattiyakul, Ellen K. Chamberlain, Jun-Tse Fu Hung-Ju Liao, Wei Hsiu Yang, Martin F. Sancho, Juliana Morales Castro, Titima Sornsrivichai, Ramaswamy C. Anantheswaran, Vinod K. Goel (co-advisee).

The visiting scientists who also helped in the program are Alfredo A. Vitali (Brazil), Paul Okechukwu (Nigeria), Carlos Grosso (Brazil), and Cheila Moth (Brazil). He also credits the success of his program to people who have worked with him over the years, including Herb Cooley, who has been his technician since 1978.

Delaware Geological Survey Releases Delaware 3-D Map

NEWARK, Del. — The Delaware Geological Survey (DGS) at the University of Delaware has issued "Selected Geomorphic Features of Delaware," DGS Special Publication No. 24 by Kelvin W. Ramsey, William S. Schenck, and Lillian T. Wang.

This map originally was released as a poster for this year's Earth Science Week activities at the Delaware Geological Survey in Newark, where more than 1,500 maps were distributed to schools, school children, and the public.

On a 1-inch to 4-mile scale, the map shows a black, white and gray tone 3-D shaded relief image of Delaware that was created using digital elevation data, with the coastal marshes, rivers, and streams plotted on top of the base map. The Digital Elevation Models (DEMs) used were developed by John Mackenzie in UD's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources Spatial Analysis Laboratory, from rasterized 1992-93 U.S. Geological Survey digital line graph hypsography data.

On an accompanying map labeled with cities and towns, selected geomorphic features visible on the shaded relief image are identified, including the major Delaware Bay/Atlantic-Chesapeake Bay drainage divide, ancient Delaware Bay and Atlantic coast shorelines, Carolina bays, sand dunes, an area called "The Levels," Iron and Chestnut hills, Piedmont uplands, coastal plain and the fall line.

Special Publication No. 24 is available as a downloadable product from the Delaware Geological Survey web page at http://www.udel.edu/dgs/webpubl.html. Copies may be requested by contacting the Survey at (302) 831-2833 or by e-mail at delgeosurvey@udel.edu.

Hightower, LaDuke To Take On 'Business As Usual' At 10th Annual PASA Conference

The theme of this year's conference is "Food Is Our Commonwealth — Beyond Business As Usual."

Keynote speaker Jim Hightower will set the tone of "Beyond Business as Usual." Hightower is the former Texas agriculture commissioner as well as an author, radio commentator, public speaker, and political sparkplug.

As Texas ag commissioner, he used government to help bring social justice and economic opportunity to all Texans, particularly small farmers. He is the author of "Hard Times, Hard Tomatoes," "There's Nothing in the Middle of the Road but Yellow Strips and Dead Armadillos," and most recently, "If the Gods Had Meant Us to Vote, They Would Have Given Us Candidates."

Joining Hightower at the PASA conference is Winona LaDuke. LaDuke is an Ojibwe activist from the White Earth Reservation in northern Minnesota. She ran with Ralph Nader as the 2000 Green Party vice-presidential candidate. LaDuke is the founder of the White Earth Land Recovery Project and the author of several books, including "All Our Relations."

The conference will feature 50 workshops on topics ranging from pastured poultry to composting, seasonal dairy production to biotech issues, high tunnel production to cover cropping, farm training of interns and apprentices to organic grain production. It will host speakers, including Gary Zimmer, Jo Robinson, George Devault, David Zartman, Jane Mt Pleasant, Joan Gussow, and Jim and Adele Hayes.

Returning conference highlights of Farming for the Future are the delectable meals featuring locally and sustainably produced foods, a youth program for children, and a large and exciting trade show.

For more information, call Kate Francis at the PASA office at (814) 349-9856 ext. 2 or check out the PASA website at www.pasafarming.org. Conference brochures will be available in December.

Cornell Fermented, Dried Meats Workshop Targets Small-Scale Entrepreneurs

GENEVA, N.Y. — The latest in a series of hands-on workshops, "Good Manufacturing Practices for Fermented Meats (sausage) and Dried Meats (jerky)," was held at the Meats Facility in Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Dec. 8.

The program was sponsored by the Northeast Center for Food Entrepreneurship (NECFE), Cornell Cooperative Extension, the Cornell Department of Food Science and Technology, the Cornell Department of Animal Science, and the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets. The 18 participants included small-scale processors of specialty meats and farmers interested in the small-scale meat manufacturing business.

Denny Shaw of the Department of Animal Science, Cornell University, was the instructor for the morning session. Topics included definitions of fermented sausage and dried meat products according to standards of identity; good manufacturing practices for the production of both meat product types; microbial concerns regarding meat processing; and critical control points including pH, water activity, and temperature. Casing issues were addressed and the use of starter culture for accurate and safe fermentation was emphasized.

Assisting in the instruction were Larry Decker of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets and Olga Padilla-Zakour, director of NECFE, Cornell University. Decker provided valuable insight on the regulatory aspects of fermented sausage and dried meat production. He and Padilla-Zakour fielded questions from participants, helping to clarify regulatory and food safety concerns, as well as explaining key terms and procedures associated with the processing of fermented sausages and dried meat products.

During lunch, participants had an opportunity to sample one another's meat products. Afterwards, the hands-on demonstrations of fermented sausage and jerky production began. Shaw covered mixing, grinding, casing choice and stuffing for a pepperoni-type sausage. Low-cost alternatives for small processors were addressed and, where equipment was available, demonstrated. At one point, participants were invited to try their skill with the hand-operated sausage-stuffing machine. Shaw also took participants through the steps involved in making a marinated beef jerky, including slicing and drying.

Padilla-Zakour demonstrated the use of a water activity meter and a pH meter on meat products. The measurements were discussed from both food quality and food safety perspectives. Decker added information on proper food handling and kitchen requirements, and clarified labeling regulations pertaining to the use of liquid and natural smokes.

Response to the program was very positive. Further offerings of the Meats Workshop, to be held near Albany or New York City, are under serious consideration.

Future NECFE-sponsored programs include "Tilling the Soil of Opportunity," a practical training using NxLeveL Agricultural Entrepreneurship Curriculum offered at the Food Research Laboratory at Cornell University's New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y., on Jan. 9-10, Jan. 23-24, and Feb. 20-21; "A Taste of Specialty Foods," presented at the 2001 Farmers' Direct Marketing Conference in Owego, N.Y., Feb. 5; "Food Safety for the Entrepreneur," offered March 22 in Burlington, Vt.; and the Better Process Control School in Geneva, N.Y., May 7-10.

For more information or to ask about scheduling programs in your area, contact the Northeast Center for Food Entrepreneurship toll-free at (888) 624-6785, locally at (315) 787-2274, or through the Web at www.nysaes.cornell.edu/necfe.

Scholarship To Benefit Tuskegee Biosciences Students

WILMINGTON, Del. — DuPont recently announced the Norman Borlaug/DuPont Scholarship Program at Tuskegee University in Alabama.

DuPont's Center for Collaborative Research and Education will provide $100,000 during a three-year period to support undergraduate and graduate students in the biosciences.

The focus of this scholarship program will be on student education and training in the biosciences and the use of a variety of research tools, including biotechnology, to benefit developing countries.

Borlaug won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1970 for his work reversing food shortages in India and Pakistan by teaching the techniques of high-yield agriculture. DuPont is the initial investor in Norman Borlaug University, an Internet-based life long learning company for agriculture and the food system.

Tuskegee University is nationally and internationally recognized for maintaining an outstanding track record in teaching, research, and outreach. Tuskegee is a leading producer of African-American engineers and scientists. Its research and development centers have formed successful relationships with public and private sector partners. The Tuskegee graduate scholarships will be part of their SOFSEC/SABRAD/SACUC Twelve State Biotechnology Education and Outreach Program and the Thurgood Marshall Program.

"I look forward to my association with Tuskegee University and their very impressive bioscience initiatives related to developing countries. It connects closely to my current work with the Sasakawa Africa Foundation," Borlaug said.

"DuPont enjoys a special relationship with Dr. Borlaug because he started his career as a microbiologist at DuPont. It is an honor to help him continue his work addressing important issues related to agriculture and world hunger," said James C. Borel, president, DuPont Crop Protection.

"As an 1890 land grant institution, our mission has been to provide teaching, research, and service to the members of our community and to the world," said Dean Walter Hill of the College of Agricultural, Environmental, and Natural Sciences. "This Scholarship Program delivers important resources to help us fulfill our mission. We value the association with Dr. Borlaug, one of the truly great figures in the 20th century, and with DuPont."

KNIGHT

Verti-Maxx™ Mixers

Introducing Models 5042 and 5060
420 and 600 cubic feet

The new Knight Verti-Maxx is the most innovative vertical mixer ever built. Its exclusive design features a simpler drive system, a lower loading height, and delivers a more consistent, thorough mix with faster processing time, all at a competitive price. The Verti-Maxx twin augers and bull gear drive provide the best performance, dependability and value in the industry, day in and day out. Check out these features and benefits:

- The Verti-Maxx vertical mixer mixes the widest variety of feedstuffs, including large round bales, large square bales, and baleage
- Twin augers provide faster material movement and a thorough mixing action.
- Twin auger design also provides a lower loading height for easier loading.

The Benefits of a Rotary Hoe are More Than Just Breaking The Crust.

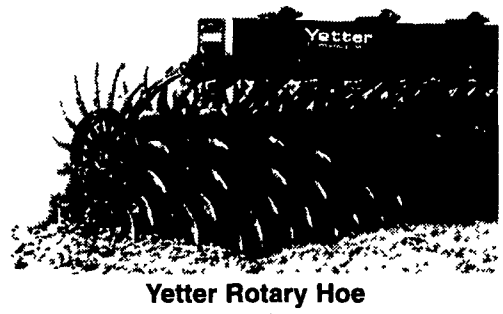
Yetter

Defining Solutions



Yetter Rotary Hoe

- Aggressively uproots weeds
- Incorporates herbicide
- Aerates soil before planting
- Follows soil contour
- Staggered arms allow residue flow
- Note Individual arms can be raised to use as a cultivator

Yetter Rotary Hoes allow you to keep ripping out weeds year after year with the same iron

• Along with killing those yield-robbing weeds, you benefit by busting yield-limiting crusted soils. Isn't it time you kicked the can and got the Hoe? Yetter Rotary Hoes, a guaranteed approach to environmentally-friendly weed control with the added benefits of time-saving speed and accuracy - year after year.

Superior Service at a Competitive Price.

DO IT RIGHT NOW!

Don't take chances with your planting season. A tune-up by the seeding specialist helps make every seed count!

When it's time to put seed in the ground, you'll need all the accuracy and consistency you've come to expect from your planter! So put top performance back into it with an overhaul from the Seeding Specialists at Deer Creek Equipment. Our skilled service professionals will overhaul everything, from seed meters to closing wheels.

*Offer applies to Farm Plan Preferred Accounts with approved credit

NO KIDDING

THE TIME IS RIGHT–AND SO IS THE PRICE!

FOLLOWING YOUR METERING UNIT INSPECTION...

You can't get a good yield from your seed if it's not planted correctly. Make sure your planter is working properly with our On Farm Planter Inspection. Our factory-trained service technicians will come to your farm to inspect your planter from the down force springs to the wiring harness. When we're done, we'll give you a complete list of items that need attention or repair. Have Deer Creek do any needed repairs and we'll haul your planter free of charge. Or, we can supply you with all the parts to do it yourself.

METERING UNIT INSPECTION $15.95 per row unit

Check your drill's seed boot adjustment

You don't see the seed boots when you're drilling, but boot position is critical for accurate seed placement. Make sure the seed boot is set according to instructions in the operator's manual or technical manual. The boots are attached at the center hole for most planting conditions, but they can be attached at the top hole to compensate for blade wear, for deep seeding, or to reduce trash buildup. The bottom attachment hole is used for planting in heavy trash conditions, for seeding at depths down to one inch, or when high-speed planting causes inconsistent seed depth. If the boot is too low, the opener may plug or it may not penetrate; it may even wear rapidly. If the boot is too high, the seed may not drop in the bottom of the furrow.

DEER CREEK EQUIPMENT MACHINE MAINTENANCE Tip

Performance Under Pressure

Middle of winter or heat of summer, a dairy operation never stops and never takes a day off. Because you need equipment that's up to the challenge, we invite you to take a look at the new John Deere 5000 Twenty Series Tractors and matching loaders.

With four models ranging from 45- to 75-PTO hp, there's a 5000 Twenty tractor to fit a 100-head farm or a 1,000-head commercial dairy. Each model is available with a fully enclosed climate-controlled cab to keep you comfortable no matter what the temperature. Attach one of the 521 or 541 Loaders, each engineered to fit perfectly with any 5000 Twenty Series tractor, and you've got a machine that will handle bales, clean-up chores, snow removal or anything else you can throw at it.

A dairy farm in any season is no place for light-duty equipment. To see how the new 5000 Twenty Series Tractors perform under your kind of pressure, visit your John Deere dealer today.

Berries May Inhibit Cancer, OSU Researcher Finds

COLUMBUS, Ohio — "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." Well, how about a cupful of raspberries?

The fruit, which contains compounds that may prevent, stop or reverse the development of certain cancers, has produced such promising results in studies of lab rats that one Ohio State University researcher intends to begin human clinical trials upon approved funding.

Gary Stoner, head of the Laboratory of Cancer Chemoprevention and Etiology at OSU's James Cancer Hospital and Solove Research Institute, found that by feeding cancer-induced rats 5-10 percent of freeze-dried raspberries in their diet over a 36-week study reduced the development of tumors in the colon by 50 percent and reduced esophageal cancer by nearly 70 percent. "The results provide the basis to consider using berries as an inhibitor of these cancers in humans," said Stoner.

The findings are the latest in a series of studies in recent years that consistently point to fruits such as strawberries, cranberries, blackberries, blueberries and varieties of raspberries as being inhibitors of colon and esophageal cancer in animals. Stoner hopes that the human trials will produce the same results. "We are taking a food-based approach to cancer prevention," said Stoner. "If the berries provide protection in animals, then ultimately they would provide protection in humans."

If the human trials are approved, the research will focus on two conditions: Barrett's Esophagus, a disorder in which the lining of the esophagus goes through cellular changes caused by acid reflux, and Familial Adenomateous Polyposis (FAP), a rare genetic disease that can lead to colon cancer.

Stoner said that there is an increasing number of Americans who have Barrett's Esophagus and at least 10 percent of those with Barrett's develop a type of cancer called esophageal adenocarcinoma. "The rate of increase in the development of the disease exceeds that of any other cancer at the moment," said Stoner, adding that the survival rate is very poor. "The survival rate is about 3 percent."

FAP is a hereditary disease that becomes prevalent during the teenage years and is characterized by the development of precancerous polyps on the colon. If left untreated, the condition almost always develops into colorectal cancer.

Stoner is hoping that the raspberries will slow the rate of cell growth in patients with Barrett's Esophagus and inhibit polyp growth on the colons of FAP patients. "We don't know how the rat study will translate to humans," said Stoner. "Whatever is in the berries that protects the esophagus and colon in rats, we are hoping we will find it in humans. If we do, we will be very happy. The findings will be hot."

Ellagic acid, found in high concentrations in raspberries and other berries, has long been considered to be an anti-carcinogenic and anti-mutagenic compound that contributes to cancer inhibition. But Stoner contends that it is a combination of compounds in the fruits that aid in cancer prevention, not just the one, and that combination has yet to be discovered.

Funds for preliminary human trials are currently on hold, but Stoner is hoping to acquire half of a two-year $500,000 OSU Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center grant to begin the studies within the next few months.

Purina Hires Dairy Consultant

Dr. Frank Janicki

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Dr. Frank Janicki has been hired as dairy nutritionist and management consultant for Purina Mills, Inc.

Based in Camp Hill, Janicki, who began work in August with Purina, provides a technical and marketing support to a staff of 20 Purina dairy nutrition and management specialists and more than 25 Purina dealer farm consultants.

Janicki's geographic responsibilities for Purina's Northeast Dairy Team include New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and northern Virginia.

Janicki worked previously at Cargill's Animal Nutrition Division in Mentone, Ind. for three years as technical services manager. Prior to relocating to Mentone, he worked at Young's Livestock Nutritional Services in Roaring Spring for seven years as the technical services manager and dairy product manager.

Janicki earned a bachelor's degree in animal science in 1980 at the University of Maine, a master's degree in animal and nutritional sciences in 1983 from the University of New Hampshire, and a doctorate in 1986 in animal science (dairy nutrition) from Virginia Tech.

Miller Electric Enters TIG Torch Market

APPLETON, Wis. — Designed in-house by its own tungsten inert gas (TIG) welding engineers and operators for optimum performance and hand comfort, Miller Electric Mfg. Co. has introduced its Diamond Back™ TIG torch series.

The head of the Diamond Back torch features scalloped indentations on right, left, and top sides for finger-grip placement. For precision operators who hold the torch like a pencil, this shape increases control over torch movements while reducing hand fatigue.

"The Diamond Back torch falls into the hand much the same way an ergonomic pencil does," said Mike Sammons, product manager, Miller Electric. "It's patent-pending Diamond Grip™ shape is much more comfortable than a plan grip. We hope it will encourage more bench-top operators to hold the torch by the head, as that often helps increase precision."

A more comfortable grip also makes it easier for operators to maintain weld consistency throughout the day.

For operators TIG-welding pipe, many of whom hold the torch by the handle, the back of the handle features a recess where operators can rest their thumb. The torch naturally pivots around this recess, making it easier to walk the cup around the pipe's circumference. The handle also features tighter knurling than other torches, so it's less likely to slip out of the operator's grip.

"Because everyone holds a torch differently, we designed the Diamond Back torch to accommodate a wide variety of personal styles," said Sammons. "In fact, if an operator doesn't use the Diamond Grip or cup walking features, he or she won't even notice them."

The Diamond Back series includes air-cooled torches rated at 125, 150 and 200 amps and water-cooled torches rated at 250 and 350 amps, all at 100 percent duty cycle. The new torches can be ordered as part of the TIGRunner® packages featuring Miller's Maxstar®, Dynasty® and Syncrowave® series of TIG welding machines. They are also compatible with older Miller machines and competitive units.

'Super-Sized' Baler Gives Hay Producers 17 Percent More

Too good to be true? Not so, say the hay specialists at Vermeer, who just recently introduced a new "super-sized" hay baler to accompany their original Vermeer® 5400 Rebel Baler.

The Rebel 5500 Baler is described as a cost-effective "super-sized" alternative for individuals with fewer acres to bale; one that gives producers the freedom to bale their own hay without experiencing "sticker shock."

The Rebel 5500 Baler produces a larger 65-inch diameter bale, 17 percent larger than standard 60-inch diameter x 60-inch wide bales. Operators have fewer bales to roll and handle; as a result, they're able to harvest more hay per day. (Overall bale capacity: 65-inches diameter x 61-inches wide, up to 1,500-pounds.

"This is one tough little baler," said Mark Core, director of the Vermeer ag division. "We've seen as many as 2,000 bales go through these new Rebel machines during their first season of baling, well above the 500 to 1,000 bales typically produced by our target audience.

"List price on this machine is extremely competitive," he said, "and it allows more people who have never baled before — and folks with older trade-ins — to get into this market with a proven, one-year warranted baler that, in many instances, costs less than smaller used machines."

The Rebel 5500 Baler is designed for operating ease. It features a "hitch and go" style that's simple to hook up and easy to operate. It has fewer moving parts, requires fewer adjustments, provides ready access for service, and maintenance, and needs just a minimum 60 horsepower tractor to run it.

Farm Bureau Announces Gold And Silver Key Awards

GLENMONT, N.Y. — Each year, New York Farm Bureau, the state's largest general farm advocacy organization, recognizes various county farm bureaus for attaining outstanding achievements by involving leaders and members in programs serving agriculture.

This year — at the organization's state annual meeting in Buffalo — Chenango, Erie and Fulton County Farm Bureaus were awarded the coveted Gold Key Award.

The following counties each received various Silver Key awards: Cattaraugus, Chenango, Clinton, Dutchess, Erie, Fulton, Long Island, Montgomery, Niagara, Ontario, Rensselaer, Saratoga, Schoharie, Seneca, Washington, Wayne, and Yates counties.

"It's with great pleasure that New York Farm Bureau award County Farm Bureau's with these honors. It is recognition for their hard work and dedication to the agricultural industry," said John W. Lincoln, president of New York Farm Bureau.

"Programs and projects carried out by county Farm Bureaus allows us to succeed as an industry, garnering all the support and promotion we can. On behalf of our more than 31,000 member families New York Farm Bureau represents, we thank these counties and look forward to future promotions and activities for the betterment of agriculture."

Silver Keys are awarded to county farm bureaus that have met the award criteria and are worthy of special recognition for their program accomplishments. Gold Keys are only awarded to three county farm bureaus per year for overall program accomplishment.

Growers Planting Pioneer Hybrids Win 25 of 27 Categories In Yield Contest

DES MOINES, Iowa — Growers producing Pioneer® brand corn hybrids won 25 of 27 categories in the 2000 National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Corn Yield Contest. This includes first, second, and third place winners among nine classes.

Farmers growing Pioneer hybrids finished in first-place in all nine classes. Among second-place winners, those growing Pioneer hybrids won eight of nine categories and, among third-place winners, growers producing Pioneer hybrids won eight of nine.

Among state winners, growers planting Pioneer hybrids won 373 of 482 categories. Combining national and state winners, those planting Pioneer hybrids won 398 of 507 categories.

The highest yield within the contest was Francis Childs of Manchester, Iowa, who produced Pioneer brand hybrid 34B24 with a yield of 357.3 bushels per acre. Winning in the national AA non-irrigated class, the hybrid contained the YieldGard gene, providing resistance to European corn borer.

The NCGA Corn Yield Contest is an annual national competition among corn producers with the goal of producing the highest yields. Growers compete within a broad range of nine corn production classes, including conventional, no-till/strip-till non-irrigated, no-till/strip-till irrigated, ridge-till non-irrigated, ridge-till irrigated and irrigated classes.

For more information about Pioneer brand corn hybrids produced by contest winners and the broad range of top producing Pioneer products, growers should contact their local Pioneer products providers. More details about individual winners will be found on the Pioneer Hi-Bred International website at www.pioneer.com.

Cattle Producers Asked To Verify Signing Beef Petitions

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) announced recently that 3,000 of the nearly 126,000 producers who signed a petition requesting the U.S. secretary of agriculture to conduct a referendum on the beef checkoff would be surveyed to determine the validity of the petition.

"In the next few days, 3,000 cattle producers will be receiving letters and questionnaires from PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC), the company selected to validate the petition," said Deputy Under Secretary for Marketing and Regulatory Programs Dr. Enrique Figueroa. Producers will be asked to verify that they signed the petition and that they were cattle producers subject to the beef checkoff assessment at the time they signed the petition. The words, "Beef Checkoff Validation," will be printed on the envelope to let producers know that it is important that they open the envelope and read the letter.

Each producer will be asked to respond to the following questions:

(1) Did you sign a petition sheet or card requesting a referendum on the Beef Checkoff Program during the period Sept. 1, 1998, through Aug. 31, 1999?

(2) Did you sign the petition as an individual or a representative of a corporation?

(3) Were you a cattle producer subject to the mandatory $1-per-head assessment at the time you signed your petition?

Producers also will be requested to include documentation showing that they owned or sold cattle anytime during the period Sept. 1, 1998, through Aug. 31, 1999.

Producers are requested to complete the questionnaire and return it along with the requested documentation by the date indicated in the letter so PwC can consider their responses in this important validation process.

Passing On The Farm Workshop Jan. 18

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Transferring a family farm to the next generation seems as natural as the change in seasons.

But tax traps, family squabbles, and lack of financing or business planning challenge many families attempting a transition — and outright threaten the continuation of some farms.

To help Pennsylvania farm families navigate these challenges, Pennsylvania Farm Link and Penn State Cooperative Extension will host a "Passing on the Farm" Workshop from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Jan. 18 at the Berlin Community Center.

Pennsylvania Farm Link, based in Manheim, is a non-profit organization dedicated to ensuring the continuation of family farms.

Marion Bowlan, executive director of Pennsylvania Farm Link, said, "In addition to providing for our food and fiber needs, farm families provide economic stability to our rural areas, protect its prime farmland, and steward the land for succeeding generations."

These workshops are a first step. Speakers will address bringing the next generation into the farm business, farm viability, farmland preservation programs, estate planning, legal aspects of transfers, retirement planning, and financing for new farmers. In addition, farmers from the region will discuss their families' efforts to transfer their businesses to the next generation.

A hot lunch will be available at the meeting at a cost $7 per person. Reservations and checks payable to Pennsylvania Farm Link must be received by Jan. 12 to reserve lunch. Send them to Pennsylvania Farm Link, 2708 A North Colebrook Road, Manheim, PA 17545. Include your name, address, and telephone number. For directions, contact Farm Link at (717) 664-7077.

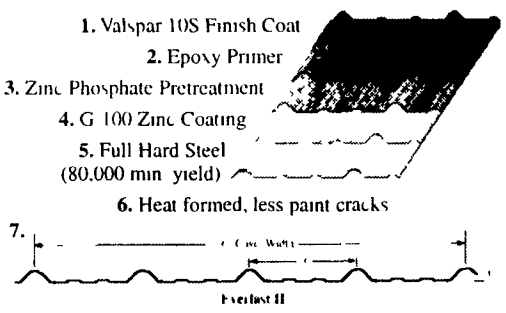
Everlast Roofing, Inc. — Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process
"The Best"

1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3. Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4. G 100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6. Heat formed, less paint cracks
7. Everlast II



NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention
2 Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion
3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider
4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels
5 Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc
6 Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)
7 Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F
8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$46.74 PER SQUARE
$1.48 PER LINEAL FT.

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Consider a Mueller precooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

REGISTERED ANGUS AND CROSSBRED BRED HEIFERS

The Department of Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State University is offering 10 registered Angus and 5 Simmental/Angus crossbred bred heifers for sale. These heifers are the result of a rigorous breeding program with selection for growth, maternal, and carcass traits of economic value to cattlemen. Several of these heifers were bred to calve in January and February, and the remainder will calve before May 1, 2001. Service sires include SAF Fame and high performance Penn State bulls. The Angus heifers are priced at $1000 each and the crossbreds are priced at $850 each with discounts available for groups of 5 or more heifers.

We Have Beautiful Llamas For Sale

Our llamas are halter trained, eat out of our hand, and are friendly. They can be used for packing, coyote protection, for wool, as pets, for stress reduction, as well as for a way of life. We have been in the llama business for 14 years, and will give advice and follow-up on the llamas we sell. They are all registered with the International Llama Registry. We can help you get started with a small herd of llamas at a reasonable price. We offer day llama treks, including a meal. Visit our farm and see what we have to offer!

BALDRIDGE CORN SILAGE HYBRIDS
*With Baldridge silage hybrids, most dairyman can feed more silage and less grain while getting a 3 to 4 pound increase in milk production per cow per day. Silage hybrids ranging in maturity from 104 days to 123 days For more information or to place an order call 1-800-639-4484.

OPTIONS IN FEEDING
Your Dairy Herd
Call us today for a feeding program built to fit your Dairy Herd and your Production Goals.

For maximum performance and income over feed cost, rations should be balanced to provide the optimum levels of degradable and undegradable protein, nonstructural and structural (fiber) carbohydrate as well as minerals and vitamins. This allows for maximum utilization of the rumen microbes and total ration efficiency Because you needs may be different from your neighbor's, we adjust the following nutrients and ingredients to fit your needs and goals

- Amino Acids
- Protein
- By-Pass Protein
- Energy
- Fiber
- Calcium
- Phosphorus
- Salt
- Vitamins & Trace Minerals
- Organic Trace Minerals
- Multi-Protein Sources
- Added Animal Fat
- Rumen Inert Fats
- Buffers
- Yeast
- Zinpro
